Bloc in Revolt At Roosevelt Is Welcomed By Hamilton

'Honors' Smith, 4 Other Leaders for Action, Chairman Says.

President Is Called Breaker of Pledges

First Major Speech Is Attack on Record of Executive.

By the United Press.

New York, June 22.—John D. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, tonight opened his speaking campaign for the Landon-Knox ticket by welcoming to the Republican Party Alfred E. Smith, the four other Democratic leaders who joined him Sunday in repudiation of President Roosevelt, and the "millions of others" he said he expects to follow their course.

Addressing a meeting of the Republican national finance committee and some 2,500 party leaders and followers, Hamilton repeated the comment of Gov. Alf M. Landon, G. O. P. Presidential nominee, that "the line of demarcation between fealty to party and loyalty to country is something for each citizen to determine for himself," and then continued:

"At least five distinguished and determined citizens, led by a man who has rendered a distinguished service to your city and State, apparently made the choice between party and country, as millions of others will do before the general elections in November, and tonight we honor them for the high ideals that have prompted this action on their part."

Roosevelt Record Under Fire.

Earlier in his address he made it clear that the fire of Republican campaign guns will be concentrated on the record of President Roosevelt's broken promises.

He charged the President and the Democratic Party with "dishonesty" and pointed to the 1936 Republican platform as a "realistic, honest solution" of ills he said beset the country.

Hamilton began his address with cutting sarcasm directed at James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman.

"I haven't been able to take Jim seriously since the summer of 1934 when at Salt Lake he said, 'We are having the most economical Federal Administration you have had for years,' Hamilton said. 'That evidenced his splendid sense of humor, which he apparently retained in spite of what he has had to deal with, for he recently spoke of Gov. Landon's candidacy as 'an experiment.'

"Now it is difficult to conceive how anyone could have been in Washington for the past 3½ years to speak seriously about experiments. We shall just pass it over as another of Jim's jolly jests, but, if it was not said in the spirit of fun, then I must caution Jim to look over Charlie Michelson's speeches more carefully in the future because I am afraid Charlie may have slipped in another 'typical prairie State' phrase and Jim can't stand many more of those."

Discusses Platform.

Then Hamilton turned serious. He discussed the Cleveland convention, the party platform, the Republican nominees and then outlined the Republican campaign.

"The spirit of the platform and the spirit in which the candidates were nominated has appealed to all citizens without regard to party lines," he said. "The Republican Party has won the confidence of the Nation and has been accepted as the political vehicle by which we may hope to restore the normal activities of our citizens and the American character of our government. The Cleveland convention reflected the will of one great group and of that group alone—the rank and file of the people of this country."

He said the Republican platform, therefore, was not designed to catch votes; it was "the expression of the deep conviction of a people weary of being belittled and discouraged and determined to reassert their rights and character as individuals."

"In its planks there is a hearten-

Underwood & Underwood.

Merle Thorpe (left), editor of Nation's Business, arrives at the opening session of the twentieth annual convention of Kiwanis International here, and is welcomed before he addresses delegates from all over the world. Harper Gatton, international president, who shared with him the day's honors as speaker, greets him.

Kiwanians Hear Merle Thorpe In Veiled Attack on New Deal

Editor of Business Magazine Decries Federal Interference in Trade; 5,000 Here for Conclave; Gatton Talks.

Kiwanians from all sections of the United States and Canada, who pride themselves on being "average business men," yesterday heard Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, denounce the tendency of political agencies to interfere with trade.

Thorpe's talk was one of two addresses at the opening session of the Kiwanis International four-day convention which has brought 5,000 members of the service club and their families to Washington.

The other speech was the annual message of the international president, Harper Gatton, of Madisonville, Ky., in which the Kiwanians were urged to aid in stamping out communism, to help reduce unemployment, and to work toward restoring religion "as a greater force for good in the country."

Although Thorpe never once mentioned the New Deal outright, his depression to the fact that the tioned the New Deal outright, his remarks were a veiled attack upon the present Administration.

He declared the major issue before the country is a choice between "a government of regimenta- a government of 'we, the people,' tion, ruling from the top down, or ruling from the bottom up."

The editor of the United States Chamber of Commerce's official publication attributed the prosperity of the United States before the

Aid Bill Signed, Work Assured For 2,300,000

$2,375,000,000 Deficiency-Relief Measure Initialed by President.

By the Associated Press.

Continued Federal jobs for 2,300,000 unemployed who are on relief or certified as "in need of relief" were assured yesterday when President Roosevelt signed into law the deficiency relief bill carrying $1,425,000,000 to be spent chiefly by the Works Progress Administration.

The bill carries in its intirety appropriations of approximately $2,375,000,000.

With organization of the new program virtually completed by Harry L. Hopkins' orders directing State WPA administrators to select relief workers locally and to assure a larger share of other responsibilities, the WPA was expected to draw on the new fund immediately.

Except for $85,000,000 earmarked for the Resettlement Administration, the new relief fund will be spent by the WPA under the President's direction.

Order Expected Soon.

An Executive order providing money for WPA, which has been financed in recent months by transfers from other agencies, and another authorizing Secretary Ickes to make $300,000,000 in loans and grants from the PWA revolving fund, was expected to be issued soon.

A total of $2,375,397,537 was appropriated by the deficiency relief act, including $458,631,860 for the social security program and $308,000,000 for emergency conservation work.

In contrast to the eight months

The "payless" 4,200 Government workers in Washington will get their pay today or tomorrow.

Continuance of the Capital's alley clearance project also is provided for in the $2,375,000,000 deficiency-relief bill, which President Roosevelt signed yesterday.

Both these measures were passed during the last days of Congress.

A total of $1,425,000,000 is appropriated by the deficiency act for the continuance of work-relief in addition to funds for the TVA, the Social Security Board, the CCC and other agencies.

The relief money, along with more than $1,000,000,000 left from the current $4,000,000,000 program and other funds, will give the New Deal about $3,446,000,000 to create employment during the 1936-1937 fiscal year.

Jobs will be given about 3,000,000 needy on works progress, public works, rural rehabilitation and other projects. Most of the money will be spent by WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins.

To 4,200 employes of the National Park Service, the President's signature meant that their June 15 pay checks would be handed them within two or three days. It also meant payment of gas, telephone and rent bills on which the service has been

Edward VIII, 42 Today, to Lead Troops in Brilliant Pageantry

By the Associated Press.

London, June 22.—King Edward VIII, 42 years old tomorrow, will observe the day publicly by leading his guards in the coorful ceremony of trooping the colors, traditional salute to His Majesty's birthday.

The King will ride through the streets at the head of the troops wearing a scarlet and gold full dress uniform with the blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter across his breast.

For the King the parade is but one item in a busy day, but for the public and for American visitors particularly, it will be one of the brilliant events of the season.

The King's staff, meanwhile, is busy making arrangements for Edward's summer holiday at Cannes, where he will spend a month, beginning late in July. It will be the first time a British monarch has spent a holiday out of the country since the reign of Edward VII, the present monarch's grandfather.

While flags flutter from every rooftop tomorrow and military bands play along the three-lined mall the King will ride his charger to Buckingham Palace, escorted from the parade ground by a brilliant array of foreign attaches and officials of the court. At the palace he will take the final salute as the whole parade files past.

Inside the palace a special staff in the royal postoffice will work all day long at its task of sorting out the shoals of telegrams and letters expected from every corner of the empire and elsewhere. Some are likely to be from the King's many friends in the United States.

In the evening there will be a private dinner party, attended by members of the royal family, but the King will not take part in any further public ceremonies because of court mourning.

French Order Border Army Strengthened

50 Ships' Sailors Strike; Rightists, Leftists Clash 3d Day.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 22.—On the eve of a parliamentary announcement of the new French government's foreign policy, heavy troop reinforcements were ordered to the German frontier, sources close to the ministry of war revealed tonight.

The proposed movements are part of a program mapped out by the new ministry of defense under Edouard Daladier, and include more than 30,000 soldiers, it was estimated authoritatively.

The troops will be moved up to the north and east borders following Minister Daladier's decision.

The disclosure came on the eve of tomorrow's Parliamentary session when the foreign policy of the new Leftist government of Premier Leon Blum is to be announced.

Franco-German Relations.

In the afternoon Parliamentary meeting, Yvon Delbos, the new foreign minister, is expected to cover Franco-German relations, and the armament question, both problems having been dumped into the laps of the new government by the outgoing group following Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland.

The new troop movement includes the creation of a new division of North African troops and the strengthening of other divisions with extra regiments and battalions.

The new troops will be stationed at points forming a line stretching between the Belgian and Swiss borders.

A regiment of Moroccan riflemen will be moved from Fez, Morocco, to Metz and Thionville.

Meanwhile Red flags flew over ships in Marseille Harbor today when sailors struck. Rightists clashed with police and Leftists here for the third successive day.

Run Up Red Banners.

Sailors aboard French merchant ships in Marseille signalized the first walkout by running up the Red banners; then they forcibly prevented officers from obeying owners' instructions to remove the flags.

The walkout affected 50 ships. Several hundred passengers who were ready to sail on three liners for Mediterranean ports went ashore, but the sailors refused to move their baggage.

The passengers suffered further discomfort because of a hotel strike which left only two establishments open. Many sought to spend the night in private homes.

Sailors struck, occupying the ships, when the owners asked for time to consider union demands of a 40-hour week.

The ministry of the interior announced there are still 204,000 workers on strike throughout France. Before recent settlements were effected nearly 1,000,000 were out.

Nationalist opponents of the government, angry because of an order dissolving Rightist leagues, announced they would hold daily demonstrations in the streets.

Thirty are Arrested.

Police made some 30 arrests and left a guard in the station.

The Nationalists shouted such slogans as "France for the French!" and "Down with the Jew!" referring to the new Socialist premier, Leon Blum.

Members of the Rightist Croix de Feu, a political organization of war veterans which has defied a decree dissolving them, fought hand to hand with police in the streets yesterday.

New decrees to force the Rightist leagues out of existence are being planned by the government.

Dirigible Hinted; Observer to Fly With Hindenburg

Further indication that the United States Navy is contemplating the construction of a new giant airship to match the German Zeppelin Hindenburg, was evidenced yesterday with the assignment of Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade as an observer on a round-trip transatlantic flight of the giant dirigible.

As a member of the general board, policy-forming body of the department, Admiral Greenslade will be one of the officers who will be called upon this summer to decide whether Uncle Sam shall undertake a new venture in the lighter-than-air field.

He is to leave Washington this morning for Lakehurst, N. J., from where the dirigible is scheduled to take off for Germany tonight. Making the trip with him as official Navy observers will be Lieut. W. E. Zimmerman, inspector of naval aircraft at the Goodyear-Zeppelin factory in Akron, Ohio, and Lieut. Gerald D. Zurmuehlin, attached to the Lakehurst Air Station.

On both the Zeppelin's previous crossings of the Atlantic, naval officers were assigned to the ship as observers. It is expected the practice will continue on the two remaining experimental flights on the Zeppelin's schedule for July.

Smith Bolters Will Be Target Of Speakers at Philadelphia; 'Ready-Made' Planks Assailed

Forthright Stands Upon Issues Are Demanded by Varied Groups.

Inroads Expected In Wagner Draft

By Robert C. Albright.

A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 22.—The ready-made platform reputedly being carried to Philadelphia by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, with the President's unofficial approval, tonight was yielding to inroads calculated to change its general character as a campaign document.

Demands for last-minute additions to and revisions of the tentative draft on labor, money, monopoly, farm and constitutional questions were piling up at convention headquarters and it appeared that at least some of the more insistent crusaders will carry their points.

A definite clash is developing between those who think that Roosevelt as President, candidate and leader of his party makes platform considerations secondary, and others who will be satisfied with nothing less than a forthright expression on specific issues.

Sniping already has started in scattered delegations against proposals to lay down a "hand-picked" platform for the convention to approve, but there are few who believe that the President, who generally manages to have his way in a Democratic Congress, will not have what amounts to final say. Such yielding as is being done, is being done by the President, and probably in such a way as to tread on as few Democratic toes as possible.

Wagner "On Move."

There are a number of Democrats here at convention headquarters to see Senator Wagner, whose mysterious whereabouts provoked reports tonight that he was simultaneously at the White House in Washington, New York and at various hotels in Philadelphia.

Among them is Gov. Herbert Lehman, of New York, who is still very much exercised over the Supreme Court's invalidation of the New York minimum wage law and wants to write into the Democratic platform a strong labor plank with specific assurances that either the Federal Government or the States have authority to enforce wages and hours legislation.

Those who have been framing the tentative platform have been somewhat shy about nibbling at the bait they believe was set out for them by Gov. Alf Landon, when he indorsed a constitutional amendment if needed to assure the States a free hand in minimum wage legislation for women. The first inclination was to go the whole route, and ask an amendment giving the Federal Government this power, but the trend now among platform draftsmen is to back away from any specific mention of a constitutional amendment. Forecasts of steel labor troubles, however, have given impetus to some forceful expression on wages and hours.

Labor Plank Problem.

The labor plank, just at this time, is second only to the farm plank, in the anxiety it is giving leaders. The American Federation of Labor delegation arrived in Philadelphia today, bearing the same labor platform they carried, with little success to Cleveland. John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers delegation will be here in a day or two and they already have strong backing for a bituminous regulatory clause in the plank.

There is more than just surface rivalry between the two groups. Green succeeded in getting his Government contracts bill through the last Congress. Lewis failed to obtain passage of the Guffey coal bill. To say that the mine leader is disgruntled would be putting it mildly.

There is said to be no mention of bituminous coal control in the original platform draft, but there is good reason to believe there will be some recognition of Lewis' views in the final report. Not only does his organization affect more than 500,000 votes in Pennsylvania, Ohio,

Philadelphia, June 22.—A Republican mayor tonight gave the visiting Democrats the gong, banging the historic Liberty Bell in Independence Hall 19 times with a rubber-headed hammer to remind the Nation of "our priceless heritage of liberty."

S. Davis Wilson, Mayor of Philadelphia, once a Democrat, then elected to office as a Republican, and now friendly to the New Deal, did the bell-ringing before three microphones that carried the barely audible tones of the hallowed bell throughout the country.

The affair which culminated in the mayor's swatting the bell, once, nine times, three times and six times, to spell out 1936, began four and one-half hours earlier in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

Roosevelt Busy Drafting Planks For Convention

Lewis' Support Held Sign of Liberal Program for Labor.

An inkling that one of the planks would be decidedly liberal was given when John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, emerged after a peek at the labor provisions to pledge the support of labor's largest and most militant unit.

The President called in those few of his political advisors who had not already decamped for the Philadelphia convention, detaining some of them for long periods.

Most important was a 5-hour conference attended by Harry Hopkins, Works Progress administrator; William Bullitt, Ambassador to Russia, and John Dickinson, assistant Attorney General. All declined comment on leaving the Executive offices.

Lewis called to tell the President that failure of Administration leaders to push through the Guffey-

Indians Urge D. C. Suffrage At Tea Parties

Philadelphia, Pa., June 22.—Indians, decked in paint and feathers, invaded the lobbies of Philadelphia hotels tonight, staging for the benefit of delegates to the Democratic National Convention, not a Boston Tea Party, but a District of Columbia tea party.

The demonstration was a part of a determined drive being made by the Washington delegation for a plank in the Democratic platform pledging the party to make provision for votes for the District. The delegation is asking that the Democrats declare for representation of the District to vote for President.

The Indians, 18 of whom came by bus from the colony residing on the Mount Vernon highway near Washington, distributed thousands of small packets of tea. To each packet was attached a card. On one side was printed, "Remember the Boston Tea Party?" on the other card said, "Taxation without representation is un-American. Give Washington the vote."

Pointing out that the voteless District of Columbia has a larger population than 13 of the States, District Commissioner George Allen is planning to go before the platform committee as soon as it is organized with his demands for a platform plank promising to give Washington the vote.

Meanwhile, every delegate to the convention will be constantly reminded of the demands of Washington voters for the rights to participate in their government. An envelope containing cartoons and reproductions of newspaper articles stating the case of the voteless District will be sent to each of the delegates. Meanwhile, placards with the words, "Vote a vote for the voteless District of Columbia," have appeared throughout the downtown district of Philadelphia and in the convention hall.

The District delegation met tonight and organized for the convention, John B. Colpuys, United States marshal for the District, was named chairman and Allen was elected vice chairman.

Plane 'Drops In' on Normandie; Shaken Pilot Is 'Terribly Sorry'

By the Associated Press.

Gosport, England, June 22.—A dazed and rather frightened young Royal Air Force pilot crawled out of the wreckage of his plane on a deck of the giant French liner S. S. Normandie today and told Capt. Rene Pugnet:

"I am terribly sorry about this."

The pilot, who was only shaken up, crashed when he tried to fly over a huge steaming funnel and struck the stay of a mast. Hot air robbed his wings of their lift and only a supreme effort prevented his dropping into the funnel.

"The landing," said Capt. Pugnet, "was one of the most extraordinary sights I have seen. The bomber just sat down like a stone. The undercarriage ripped to bits a few inches from the forward mast."

The plane crashed into a derrick unloading an automobile, the derrick broke and the car crashed on the deck, half on and half off the ship.

The pilot, Lieut. G. K. Horsey, said that when he flew over the funnel he felt as if the plane were being "sucked in."

Lieut. Horsey went ashore. The Normandie, the airplane still on deck, sailed for Le Havre with the unexpected cargo.

Orators Revamp Talks, Preparing to Attack 'Disloyal' Bloc.

Gavel Falls Today For Noon Session

'Walkers' Few, Lehman Says; Barkley to Give Keynote Tonight.

By Felix Bruner.

A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, June 22.—Alfred E. Smith, in spite of general protestations here that the statement by him and four other Democrats asking that Roosevelt be "put aside" carried little or no significance, today became the real issue of the Democratic National Convention here tomorrow.

Democratic leaders and orators at last have found a target upon which to center their fire. After days of preparing speeches containing little but expressions "pointing with pride" to the accomplishments of the Administration, the orators were busy today revamping their manuscripts to include references to men disloyal to the party, to the Liberty League and to the alleged insignificance of the position of party bolters.

The convention will open at noon tomorrow, when James A. Farley, national chairman, cracks down his gavel before a battery of microphones in the Municipal Auditorium. The first shot at Smith may be fired when the combination chairman and Cabinet member makes his opening remarks, but it is probable that the attack will be saved for later. The first session will last little more than an hour. Tomorrow night the real fireworks will begin with the keynote speech by Senator Barkley, of Kentucky.

Farley "Opens Field."

Farley issued today what amounted to a free-for-all invitation to delegates to reply to Smith, Bainbridge Colby, James A. Reed, Joseph B. Ely and Daniel F. Cohalan, signers of the "Ditch Roosevelt" statement.

"I don't think the Smith statement warrants any comment from me," Farley said. "There are plenty of substantial Democrats in this country who will take care of answering it."

But the answering will be no haphazard affair. Like most things in this convention, it will be well planned. The reply is expected to come when the roll call of States for speeches seconding the nomination of President Roosevelt is begun. Barrages will come from every section of the country.

Principally the answer will come from Gov. Lehman of New York, who up to this time, in spite of party differences, has been a close political friend of both Smith and Roosevelt. It is Lehman who has been credited with bringing Roosevelt and Smith together in a public handshaking after the 1932 convention.

Lehman Statement.

Lehman yesterday, however, definitely cast his lot with the President as against Smith. Referring to what has become known among delegates as the "statement of the quintuplets," Lehman said:

"I have read the statement and I am confident that the views expressed by the signers represent the feelings of only a handful of Democrats. The great rank and file of the party, as well as the independents of the country, stand four-square behind the policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

This was the first open break between Lehman and Smith in the long controversy which resulted in the latter first "taking a walk" and then actually going over to the opposition. Lehman has indicated he will not seek renomination for the New York governorship, but Administration leaders still expressed themselves as hopeful he would reconsider. Discussing his refusal to seek renomination, Lehman predicted President Roosevelt will carry the State regardless of who heads the State ticket.

Farley said neither the national committee nor any of the delegates, so far as he knew, had received directly a copy of the Smith statement. He said Smith would not be invited to come to the convention, pointing out that he is a delegate and needs no invitation. It was reported Al Kennedy, a New York delegate, had sent such an invitation to the former Governor and

Band Oompah Sadly Absent In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, June 22.—The lack of Oompah at this gathering of Democrats has become a matter of serious concern, at least to reporters, who are so accustomed to Oompah that they cannot work without it.

Oompah, you will remember, is the noise made by the man in a brass band who is completely encased in the tubing of his giant horn.

And Oompah is as essential to any political convention as the cob is to corn, or as cabbage is to corned beef, or more so. Yet the convention's major-domo, James A. Farley, has not provided a single brass band to parade deafeningly through hotel lobbies. The only free music in Philadelphia comes from the loud-speakers set up in front of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel here and that, somehow, is not the same.

In Cleveland the Landon forces had one of the most powerful bands that ever made a lady delegate stab herself in the cheek with her fork. The conductor, a dynamic little man 5 feet high and 4 feet wide, told me proudly then: "We may not play good, but, baby, can we play loud!"

It would pay Maestro Farley to bring that organization to tote and toot their horns up and down the streets here, for they could produce a blast of such richness and power that the least rhythm-sensitive delegate would start to his feet, "truckin'" automatically in the best Harlem style.

The nearest thing to a band is a small group of violinists who play sad, sweet waltzes in the center of the vast hall where the New Deal's exposition of progress is holding forth.

This exposition, incidentally, is worth considering, since a great many powerful editorials are shortly going to be written attacking it as a waste of thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money.

Whether it's a waste or not, it certainly represents the expenditure of lots of solid iron men. It's a sort of world's fair of the New Deal in one great room, where commercial exhibits and automobile shows are often held, and is superbly laid out with exhibits of the work of all of the Government departments, featuring particularly the fruits of the labors of the emergency administrations.

This is the way it looks:

In a building next to the convention hall you go down some steps past an exhibit of wild men of the Congo, primitive handicraft of the Hopi Indians, and birdseed from foreign countries, all of which belong to the Commercial Museum here, and enter a green door.

Here the full force of the exposition strikes you forcibly. Not, however, before you have time to notice by far the most attractive booth in the whole show, a display of four excesively beautiful sun-tanned young ladies lounging on an artificial beach underneath a sign saying simply: "Set Sail for Atlantic City." In front of this booth, day and night, you will find a circle of ardent Democrats, just standing there and staring, and occasionally heaving little sighs of sincere, though wistful, admiration.

The four young ladies work in six-hour shifts, being replaced at regular intervals by four others every whit as lovely, and similarly dressed either in bandanna-top bathing suits, or sun-suit-culottes. All they have to do is to sit and smile, and that seems quite enough.

Choice of Exhibits.

Once past this booth, although many Democrats have not yet progressed beyond this hyper-effective advertisement for the boardwalk town, even with the best intentions, and you have your choice of exhibits.

These range from dummies dressed in the various uniforms of the history of the American Army and Navy, through torpedoes, depth bombs, machine-guns and other paraphernalia of government on to such things as the exhibit of the Resettlement Administration.

Here the walls are lined with photographs, taken by the "before-and-after" staff of the RA. The "before" pictures show tumble-down cabins, dirty unkept children, bearded Jeeter Lester types of adults, and the general misery of share-croppers' existence.

"After" pictures, allegedly posed by Hollywood extras, at least according to the Tory press, show clean-limbed laughing young men and women standing happily among waving wheat fields, or sitting in clean new electric kitchens, surrounded by children who look remarkably like Shirly Temple and Freddie Bartholomew of the movies.

The moral is that the New Deal, finding conditions a la "before" pictures, has accomplished the economic marvel of changing the country's poor farmers into replicas of the "after" pictures.

This is all highly effective stuff, whether propaganda or not, and is carried out in scores of ways. For instance you look through a peephole into a black box at a dismal little miniature stage setting of the slums in Indianapolis.

Slum Clearance Shown.

Then you press a switch and the light instantly plays on a setting showing the same alley transformed into a modern sunlit street with beautiful cottages and erect-shouldered citizens in place of the stooped people and miserable shacks of old. This is slum clearance. Similarly the TVA, WPA, the PWA and other departments carry their points, and there are two movies going at all times bearing similar messages.

You can spend hours here, and thousands of Philadelphians, as well as numerous Democrats, are doing so, because it's a beautiful show, despite the cynicism with which it is received in some quarters.

On the way out, goggling at the Atlantic City exhibit, is none other than One-Eyed Connolly, the well-known gate-crasher, who is staring at the four damsels with much gusto. Says Connolly:

"Howzat, hey? Republicans don't have anything like that."

"Are you a Democrat?" we asked.

"Am I? Say listen, Toots, Republicans is all bums. Republicans roll off my knife like peas. I wouldn't even cross the street to crash a Republican secret committee meeting."

"Are you crashing this convention?"

By Franklyn Waltman

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—Although they make loud protestations to the contrary, Democratic leaders apparently are worried about the insurrection against President Roosevelt set in motion by Al Smith and his allied Jeffersonian Democratic leaders. They also are concerned over the potential danger involved in the Lemke-Coughlin third party movement.

WALTMAN.

But for the day at least their anxiety grew out of the Smith, et al, pronouncement of Sunday that unless President Roosevelt were put aside by the Democrats they would be forced to rally around another standard in this year's campaign. And the most unmistakable evidence of this is that, from Jim Farley down, the New Deal chieftains keep repeating that they are not worried—that they are not a bit disturbed over what Al Smith or anyone like him says or does.

Wherever one turns in the headquarters hotel there is a Democratic Senator, State leader, or ward leader asserting vigorously that they do not care a tinker's dam about what Al Smith says. Anyway, they assert, William Randolph Hearst's name should have been signed to that pronouncement. Or, as Senator James F. Byrns, of South Carolina, reiterated a dozen times, Al Smith is inspired by the green-eyed monster of jealousy and pique. And still another comment is that the Smith pronouncement constituted "cold potatoes"—that there is nothing new about it that was not in his speech at the "billion dollar" American Liberty League dinner.

These comments are cited to indicate that the Democrats are disturbed about the Al Smith insurrection. Men do not bother talking about things which do not concern them. Thus they betray their anxiety by their protestations, a condition which Shakespeare described in the line, "Methinks the lady doth protest too much."

This anxiety becomes more obvious once a glimpse is taken behind the curtain where the scenery is being shifted for the opening of the convention. There Big Jim Farley carefully and cleverly is mapping out a plot in which it is his hope to make Al Smith the arch villain and to give him as sound a drubbing as a major figure in national politics ever received.

His plan is to turn loose on the former Presidential candidate the full force of the convention oratory. Mr. Farley virtually issued an open invitation to all and sundry attending the convention to mount the rostrum during the remainder of this week to answer and assail Al Smith and the statement which he took the lead in signing.

But he did more than that. He persuaded Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to consent to make a speech before the convention, seconding the Roosevelt nomination—it is expected that the New York Governor, directly or indirectly, will reply to the Smith statement—and he indicated it was his hope that every Democratic Governor attending the convention would come through with a seconding speech.

The Democratic leaders have lost some of the cockiness which they exhibited so generally several weeks ago. They still claim an overwhelming victory in November, but privately some concede that the fight will be harder than they had expected. A Philadelphian who wished to do a little betting on the Republican ticket found no takers for his money among the gathering Democrats.

This new caution on the part of the Democrats is due in part to the unexpected activity of Al Smith; partly to the third party movement and fear of its possible effects in the agrarian States and partly to the fact that the Republicans conducted themselves more harmoniously at Cleveland than the Democrats thought they would, plus the fact that Gov. Alf M. Landon so far has made a good impression on the country.

* * *

Until Al Smith and his associates threw their bombshell, the only controversial item in this convention was the proposal to abrogate the two-thirds rule. Despite the opposition of many Southern States to this proposal, it will succeed. Most Democrats, even many from the South, believe the two-thirds rule has been an unnecessary burden on the party's back and has made possible discord at times when harmony was needed.

They regard this as an opportune time to get rid of the rule, since there is no doubt whatever about President Roosevelt's renomination. The reason the rule has not been abrogated previously is that such action would have favored one or another candidate struggling to get the nomination. This has been true on each occasion in recent years, except in 1916.

But there is one aspect of the situation which has been generally overlooked. It is that by repealing the two-thirds rule now the New Dealers are making it certain that President Roosevelt in 1940 can name the heir to his mantle.

An incumbent President, through patronage and otherwise, wields tremendous political power. An effort on his part to name his successor might be blocked under the two-thirds rule, but that seems impossible under a majority rule. President Roosevelt, undoubtedly, and Jim Farley are thinking of 1940 when precedent demands that the former must step aside.

* * *

The two-thirds rule is as old as national political conventions.

It was adopted at the first convention of the "Republican Party"—as the Democrats were then known—which met in Baltimore in 1832 to nominate Martin Van Buren for the Vice Presidency, Andrew Jackson had been renominated by State Legislatures.

The two-thirds rule was adopted to "show a more general concurrence of sentiment in favor of a particular individual," and to add to the nomination "greater moral weights." The Jacksonites proposed it to demonstrate the strength of Van Buren over John C. Calhoun.

Three years later at the national convention the two-thirds rule again was adopted in order to make an impressive showing of party unity behind Van Buren for the Presidency. At every succeeding convention the rule has been adopted—chiefly because it would have been unfair to change the rules in the middle of the game.

But the rule came back to haunt Van Buren in 1844, when it kept him from the nomination, although he received a majority vote. Champ Clark likewise in 1912 attained a majority, but failed in achieving the nomination because of the two-thirds rule. Thus in proposing its abolition, Senator Bennett C. Clark will vindicate the defeat suffered by his father.

Deficiency Bill Signed

compelled to defer remittance since April 1, due to lack of an appropriation to cover them.

The Park Service employes, most of whom are in the custodian branch, received their last pay checks on June 12. They covered ten working days. On June 1 workers had been given five days' salary.

According to H. L. Wooten, executive officer of the buildings branch of the service, the Treasury Department already had made out hundreds of checks in anticipation of the bill's approval. Two or three days will be required, however, to execute the balance of the checks and to sign them.

Service officials estimated their debt to employes at approximately $200,000. The composite phone, gas and rent bill will total about $500,000. The total deficiency appropriation was $891,740.

The majority of the workers affected were laborers and elevator operators who receive $90 a month, guards who get $100 and employes in other classifications receiving from $140 to $150 a month.

Slum Clearance.

Continuation of the Capital's slum clearance program as represented by the activities of the Alley Dwelling Authority was provided in the bill by reappropriation of the authority's unexpended funds and authorization of use of revenues from rents and sales during the next fiscal year.

The reappropriated total amounts to about $250,000 and will permit the authority to operate through the fiscal year 1937, though not on as broad a base as contemplated in a Bureau of the Budget recommendation of $300,000.

Included also in the bills signed by the President yesterday was the omnibus flood control measure, which appropriates $571,000 for development of the Potomac River. A total of $320,000,000 is appropriated by the bill for flood control projects in 40 States.

Liberty Bell's Notes Welcome Party Leaders

and the proudest citizens of Philadelphia, sat down in the huge dining room, there to eat Philadelphia capon and drink Bordeaux Graves wine in honor of 17 visiting State Governors.

Mayor Wilson, Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, Postmaster General James A. Farley and their wives sat at the long head table with the Governors. There were no speeches, and thus the only sounds punctuating the steady babble of gossip at the tables were the happy sighs of reporters busy eating without worries.

Uniformed Battalions.

Outside the hotel were lined up the Old Guard of Philadelphia, a military organization, with one battalion dressed in War of 1812 uniforms, with golden belts around their gold-frogged dark blue uniforms and long silver swords. Another battalion, the 103rd Engineers, was dressed in grey frock-coated uniformed criss-crossed by white pipe-clayed belts and wearing tall black patent-leather shakos.

There were also khaki-uniformed younger members of the Old Guard, white-hatted traffic police, blue-capped patrolmen, blue uniformed mounted police and the silver-studded grey-uniformed members of the motor bandit patrol.

Behind this imposing array, Philadelphia citizenry, many thousands strong, shoved and pushed for hours around the hotel entrance in order to get a view of the celebrities.

The dinner over, the guests, in tail-coats and glittering evening dresses and wraps, formed in order of prominence behind his Honor the Mayor, and marched the four blocks east from the hotel to Independence Hall.

First went the police, all the Philadelphia varieties. Then came the various troops and brass bands, all of which lined up at the hall's entrance to salute the dignitaries as they marched in.

Then came the mayor and his wife. Immediately behind was Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, marching with General Chairman Albert M. Greenfield, of the All-Philadelphia Citizens Committee, who brought the convention here, contributing $25,000 personally, and Representative Daly, of Pennsylvania.

Then came your correspondent, marching with another Washington reporter. This was not bumptiousness, but the work of the parade's marshal, who seemed rather impressed with us, and put us directly before Gov. Earle and Posmaster General Farley in the parade. Unwilling to refuse, we received the roaring cheers of the Philadelphia populace, lined eight-deep on the sidewalks all along the route, in a tribute we hadn't really expected.

Debutantes, Dowagers.

In the long following parade hundreds of debutantes and dowagers plodded gaily, ruining their evening slippers on the cobbles and tangled car tracks of Chestnut street without complaint.

At the beautiful hall where American independence was conceived and the Constitution created for submission to the States of the Union, the horde was slowly admitted, by card only, passing through the little hall where the first Supreme Court sat, through the little foyer where the Liberty Bell now stands, and on into the main hall, where they sat to listen to the speeches.

Then the reporters, surrounded by police, waited by the bell for the mayor to finish his speech and return to rap it.

The Liberty Bell is smaller somehow, than you expect; less grand, less imposing than you've visualized it. And yet the sight of its simple bronze shape, a little more than a yard high, the small clapper visible through the historic crack, is doubly impressive through its mere simplicity. All the more powerful is the reminder that this shabby, crudely designed little chunk of molded metal rang the tones that meant this country was a nation.

Try Tones of Bell.

We waited here while Sayre Ramsdell, radio official, rapped the Bell eight or nine times to try out its tone for the radio men, finding that the rubber-headed hammer, used for safety, rings best if held sideways. A slim, tall old man, Curator H. T. Carpenter, then showed the experimenters that the bell would ring best if banged with the elbow point, a fact he had discovered in hours of experimentation during his 20 years as head of the hall.

He was ignored, however, on the ground it wouldn't seem dignified if the Mayor of Philadelphia were to stand by the bell pounding it with his elbow and somebody pointed out the risk of hitting his crazy-bone during the beats. The curator went off, shaking his head.

Then the mayor came out, said in the microphones, "Will all those within sound of my voice rise and stand facing Philadelphia?"

Then he whacked the bell with the rubber-headed hammer and everybody went home.

candidate for President, but from New York came Smith's positive statement that he would not come to Philadelphia. Farley said that if Smith should come to the convention and should wish to speak, he would be given the privilege of doing so.

No Fight Expected.

No actual opposition to the renomination of President Roosevelt is expected to develop in the convention as a result of the Smith appeal to the delegates to nominate a "genuine Democrat." There will be at least a score of seconding speeches, many of them from governors of States. Besides Lehman, governors who are preparing their seconding talks include Bibb Graves of Alabama, and Paul V. McNutt of Indiana. The answer to Smith is to come in the form of a great wave of pro-Roosevelt oratory, from every possible geographical location.

Discussion of the Smith statement virtually has taken the place of talk about the third party which Representative Lemke, of North Dakota, is proposing to head as a candidate for President. While it is agreed this threat may be more serious than the Smith bolt, there is as yet nothing sufficiently tangible about it to permit an outright break.

Asked whether he was worried about the third party threat, Farley replied he was "not worried about anything."

"I still stick to my statement that I will not concede a single State to the opposition," he said.

"Discrepancy Is Hamilton's."

He was told that there was a considerable discrepancy between his claims and those of John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, who has predicted that the Republicans will carry 42 States.

"There is no discrepancy on my part," Farley smiled. "All the discrepancy is Hamilton's, but Hamilton is all right and Kansas is a splendid State. I'm sure the voters there will exercise the same intelligence they did in 1932."

President Roosevelt carried Kansas that year.

On the eve of the convention opening, Philadelphia for the first time was beginning to take on the busy appearance of a convention city. Every train was bringing in loads of delegates and the hotel lobbies were filled.

State delegations were meeting to select members of the resolutions committee, which will draft a platform, and members of the rules committee, which will handle the question of abolition of the two-thirds rule, a party tradition since almost the beginning of its history.

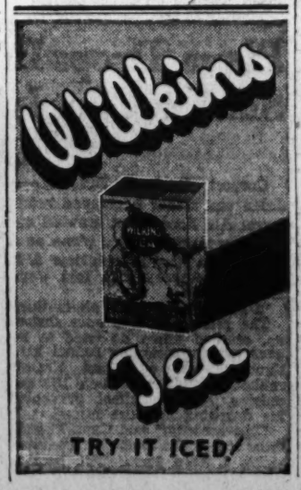
Only Three Contests.

There were only three contests over delegations—Minnesota, Canal Zone and Puerto Rico. The national committee decided to seat both Minnesota delegations, apportioning the votes among the delegates, but in doing so a controversy over party leadership in the delegation was precipitated.

Differences in the delegation were settled temporarily at a caucus tonight after half the delegates had threatened to go home. It was decided the controversy should go before the credentials committee.

One of the Minnesota delegations, headed by Representative Elmer J. Ryan, represents the regular Democratic organization. The other, headed by Joseph Wolf, represents a farmer-labor group favorable to President Roosevelt.

If both delegations remain at the convention each delegate will be given half a vote.



Swanson, Better, Pays Visit to Department

Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson paid a surprise visit to the Navy Department yesterday—the first time he has set foot in the Navy Building since he became ill almost five months ago.

His health appeared greatly improved as he chatted for almost three-quarters of an hour with Archibald Oden, his special assistant. Both refrained from talking shop.

Several weeks ago, Secretary Swanson surprised the President by walking in on a Cabinet meeting.

Repeal Is Near For Two-Thirds Rule at Parley

Philadelphia, Pa., June 22.—A wide break in the usual "solid South," opposition to abrogation of the Democratic two-thirds nominating rule developed here tonight, virtually assuring repeal of the venerable restriction on Democratic convention nominating votes.

Delegations from Southern States that have traditionally stood by the two-thirds requirement in past years, giving them what amounted to a veto power over the simple majority choice of the convention, are rapidly swinging over to the President's reported desire for a repealer.

Some few Southern delegations, and a scattering of Western units, are holding out, but much trading is in progress, and, even before negotiations are over, there seems to be little doubt as to the outcome.

The New Deal is said to have much to gain, and nothing to lose by the abrogation, particularly if the unit rule is allowed to stand, and such appears to be the present purpose. This could mean a nomination of a candidate without a majority of convention delegates, but by a majority of State delegations, possibly controlled by much fewer than a majority of individual delegates.

Under such an arrangement, it would not be difficult for an administration in power to control a convention. Conceding that President Roosevelt might not attempt to seek a third term, there are those who say his Administration would have a much better chance to pick his successor as nominee.

Among those ready to put up a fight against abrogation is Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina. Gov. Olin Johnson, of South Carolina, takes a similar view, and may speak against repeal of the rule, if Smith fails to do so. Some members of this delegation, however, such as Senator James F. Byrnes, will not put up a fight, although South Carolina is pledged against the rule.

Doughton Against Rule.

Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, who represents his delegation on the rules committee, will favor abrogation of the rule. Other Southern delegates who say they will not oppose repeal of the rule include Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, and Senator Tom Connally, of Texas.

Actively working here for abrogation of the nominating rule is Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, who issued a blast against it on his arrival here, and who says there are two things he came here for, repeal of the rule and a vacation. He is said to have been instrumental in pledging the Connecticut delegation against the rule.

Some of the Western States are swinging into line, among them Arizona, said to have promised its six votes today. Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, whose father lost the nomination because of the rule, and who as chairman of the rules committee will direct the fight for abrogation, continues to predict easy success.

Smith, of South Carolina, is said to count on the support of Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, in his fight against a repealer, but it is not known whether the Virginian will take the convention floor.

The enemies of abrogation may get some support from the West, including the vote of the Wisconsin delegation, but the opinion here is that the President's wishes, backed by the work of Cummings, and National Committee Chairman James A. Farley, will prevail, and the rule, after 104 years of dominance, go by the boards. Farley still insists the final convention showdown will be a "free and fair" fight.

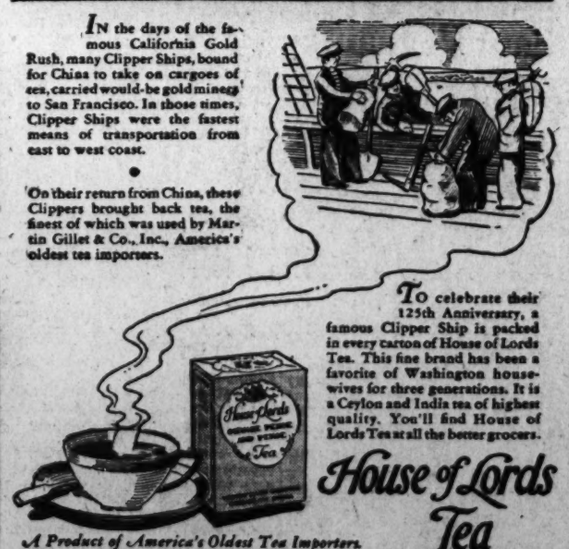
Romance of Ships and Tea

In the days of the famous California Gold Rush, many Clipper Ships, bound for China to take on cargoes of tea, carried would-be gold miners to San Francisco. In those times, Clipper Ships were the fastest means of transportation from east to west coast.

On their return from China, these Clippers brought back tea, the finest of which was used by Martin Gillet & Co., Inc., America's oldest tea importers.



To celebrate their 125th Anniversary, a famous Clipper Ship is packed in every carton of House of Lords Tea. This fine brand has been a favorite of Washington housewives for three generations. It is a Ceylon and India tea of highest quality. You'll find House of Lords Tea at all the better grocers.

Democrats to Hold Virginia Rallies

New York, June 22 (AP).—The Democratic National Committee said today that rallies would be held throughout Virginia on June 27 when President Roosevelt delivers his acceptance speech of renomination at Philadelphia.

Harry Hooker, chairman of the Virginia Roosevelt nominators, and Dr. J. Fulmer Bright, local chairman, advised W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the Democratic National Committee and national organizer of nominators, that more than 4,000 were expected at a mass meeting in Richmond.

Burr P. Harrison, Winchester chairman, reported plans for a rally that would include Frederick County.

The committee listed other cities which plan rallies and their chairmen, as follows: Alexandria, Elliott Hoffman; Newport News, John Marshall; Charlottesville, Judge John W. Fishburne; Danville, E. J. Wyatt; Hopewell, Dr. D. L. Elder; Norfolk, J. Hume Taylor.

Howell Elected To Talmadge's Committee Post

Governor Invites the Smith Bloc to Intra-Party New Deal Fight.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 22.—Gov. Eugene Talmadge, bitter New Deal foe, was removed from the Democratic national committee tonight by the Georgia delegation to the Democratic convention. Clark Howell, sr., publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, was elected to the post by acclamation.

Talmadge Won't Bolt.

Atlanta, June 22 (AP).—Gov. Eugene Talmadge called upon Alfred E. Smith and other "take-a-walk Democrats" today to join him in his intra-party fight against President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

The shock-haired Georgia executive, one of the first and most persistent critics of Mr. Roosevelt and his policies, loudly proclaimed his party regularity and dismissed any possibility of a bolt with the assertion:

"I want it understood that I am in the Democratic Party and there to stay. I think it would be a mistake to nominate Roosevelt, but I am a party man and there to stay."

"Fight From Within."

"The best thing Al Smith, Gov. Ely and the others can do is to line up with me on my plan to fight Roosevelt and the New Deal within the party.

"They should fight the New Deal from within the party instead of threatening to 'take a walk' if things don't go to suit them in Philadelphia."

The Governor kept informed of party maneuvers at Philadelphia through his executive secretary, Carlton Mobley. He sent him to the convention yesterday.

"I can get there in three hours if I can serve my party and country," Talmadge said of the convention.

Curley Minimizes Effect.

Boston, June 22 (AP).—The appeal of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York against the renomination of President Roosevelt was "not unanticipated," Gov. James M. Curley (Democrat), declared today.

Commenting on the action of a group of Democrats that included Smith, Curley said, "I feel quite certain it will not materially affect the result."

Aids Roosevelt, Says Thomas.

New York, June 22 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist presidential nominee, said today he believed Alfred E. Smith and his four colleagues, by their appeal against President Roosevelt's renomination, would "gain Roosevelt two votes for every one they alienate from him."

"People who will like the Smith letter already had decided not to vote for Roosevelt anyhow," he said. "It probably will make them dislike the President even more, but on the other hand it's certain to make certain labor groups think that Roosevelt simply must be re-elected."

Knox Sees Foe Injured.

Worcester, Mass., June 22 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican nominee for Vice President, said today that President Roosevelt's chances for re-election had been injured by the defection of Alfred E. Smith and other leaders and the entry of a third party in the national campaign.

Col. Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher was enroute from Chicago to his summer home in Manchester, N. H. He left his train in Worcester to continue his journey to Manchester by automobile.

Referring to the organization of the Union Party under the sponsorship of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, with Representative William Lemke for President, Col. Knox said:

"Lemke will pull heavily from the Democratic ranks in the Middle West."

Smith Move Futile, Coughlin Asserts

Syracuse, N. Y., June 22 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin stopped off in Syracuse today when his automobile broke down at Cazenovia, and declared his belief that Al Smith would not change the political picture this year.

"Mr. Smith's position will not make much difference in the Presidential contest," said the Detroit priest between the signing of papers at an automobile agency for the purchase of a new $3,200 automobile.

The priest said he saw no handicap for the Presidential aspirations of Representative Lemke in the passing of the deadline for filing Union Party ballots as "Mr. Lemke can preempt the party name in every State through the use of some other party, such as the United Party in Michigan."

"There will be no amalgamation of the Social Justice Union with any other party," Father Coughlin said when asked if he planned to join forces with Lemke's Union Party.

Father Coughlin said he was entirely in accord with the program "Lamke has printed."

Protest Grows Against 'Weak' Party Planks

Numerous Groups Demand Forthright Platform for Democrats.

Illinois and West Virginia, but also it is said to be generously involved in subscriptions to the Democratic year book and a box at the convention.

Borah Proposal.

There is widespread liberal agitation here for a platform declaration against continuance of holding companies beyond the second degree, not included in the original monopoly plank draft. Concessions are being made to this sentiment, it is said, and to other antimonopoly views futilely urged at Cleveland by Senator William E. Borah, who is dissatisfied with the following plan said to have been tentatively drafted:

"We undertake vigorously and zealously to enforce the antitrust laws. We believe that honest enterprise must be protected from the unfair trade practices of dishonest enterprise, and that fair competition does not include trimming the consumer or starving the wage earner."

Platform draftsmen, who officially will not go to work until the resolutions committee is named tomorrow night, are said to have prepared in preliminary form what they call a "forward looking" platform, and yet one that avoids detail and is sufficiently shy of specific proposals as to provoke the criticism of delegates who champion causes dear to their hearts.

One thing is certain, that the platform will take laudatory note of the New Deal's accomplishments, which will not be set forth overmodestly.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, practically said as much today.

"The main planks in the platform will give approval of what we have done for the country," he predicted.

May Hedge on Gold.

A major subject of discussion here is platform treatment of the monetary question. Despite forecasts of a declaration against return to the free gold standard, as an answer to Gov. Landon, there is reason to believe the gold question will be hedged.

A declaration for "sound currency" is expected, with some plea for stabilization. Connally told reporters that, in addition, "we will undoubtedly approve the reduction of the gold content of the dollar." It was reported that Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, outstanding Senate banking authority, and advocate of a dollar convertible into gold, will submit his views to Wagner. From the opposite extreme on the money question, Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, advocate of further devaluation, will submit a plank.

Obviously, it will be impossible to frame a money platform that would satisfy both.

Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee, said today he "did not know" whether Glass would represent Virginia on the resolutions committee, "but a man like Carter Glass should be a member."

On arrival in Philadelphia later tonight, Senator Glass said he felt too wearied by his recent Congressional activities to serve on the resolutions committee.

Fears 'Silver Plank.'

The Virginian failed to confirm reports that he would make money plank suggestions. He said he had seen Wagner and was not planning to. As for his money views, he repeated he would like to see the kind of sound money plank that was incorporated in the 1932 platform, but feared he might see "something about silver" instead.

Glass made clear that no bolt is involved in his unwillingness to serve on the resolutions committee. It was learned that he is in Philadelphia against doctors' orders, and if he undertook the additional strain of platform drafting, it would be against their advice. If Glass does not take his accustomed place on the resolutions committee, Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore may serve in his stead.

It developed tonight that some Western silverites, apart from the Thomas move, are seeking to incorporate some mention of silver in the monetary plank. Some of these would be contented with a mere affirmation of the New Deal's silver policy.

The labor plank, brought here by Secretary Morrison, of the A. F. of L., like the Cleveland plank, calls for a two-thirds vote by the Supreme Court on constitutional questions, wages and hours regulation for women and withdrawal of recognition from Soviet Russia.

Among the planks to be submitted to the resolutions committee by others, are the following:

An anti-basing point declaration—Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

A "take-the-profits-out-of-war" plank—Senator Connally.

Federal flood-control aid—Pennsylvania delegation.

Differences on the farm plank remain to be ironed out and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, who was not satisfied with the original draft, was reported conferring here tonight with Chester Davis, Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, and others.

Wallace is still said to be interested in some method of crop insurance, carried out through soil conservation subsidies. His ever-normal granary plan also may be recommended to the platform draftsmen. It was learned efforts to draft some statement that will convey an indorsement of production control have not been abandoned.

Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, and Mrs. Constance C. Packard, of Washington, D. C., who will serve as official reporter at the convention.

Women Voters League Hears Farley Praised

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Pennsylvania's Emma Guffey Miller turned a League of Women Coters luncheon into a debate today with a scorching defense of Postmaster General Farley and the Administration's patronage system.

Her speech, which topped the activities of conventioning women for the day, contained such sentences as:

"People would have died of starvation in the streets if we'd put PWA, WPA and the CCC under Civil Service."

"In Washington I find out, once in Civil Service, an employe feels set for life and that he need do nothing, but punch the time clock. There is no top speed under Civil Service."

"Under this 'terrible man Farley' there are 242 Democratic postal inspectors to 313 Republicans. Give us a fair hearing."

She told a story now and then that got a laugh, but otherwise the league members sat and listened in stony-faced silence.

Mrs. Leach Replies.

Then they argued back briefly. Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach said her "five long years as chairman of the New York League was no swivel chair job; cited the Federal maternity and infancy program, unemployment insurance and the Lame Duck amendment as reforms the league had helped to bring about, and said she hoped the league members would "always see to it that they are a step ahead of Government."

Said Mrs. Larue Brown, of Boston: "It is true the league hopes for accomplishments more rapidly than the professional politicians." She urged on the leaguers renewed zeal in ridding their parties of patronage.

Mrs. Miller, committeewoman for her State sister of its Democratic Senator, started her speech with:

"I am a politician."

She referred to league members as "swivel-chair sitters" who, "not being in the thick of the political arena, think things should be done quickly."

She argued that the Republican Party, not the Democratic, was the promulgator of, and profiter from patronage, and add

"I consider my party has lived by its principles which are undying, which are still the Jeffersonian principles."

Peace Plank Urged.

Meanwhile, a strongly-worded peace plank was the first product today of the women's committee for suggestions on the Democratic platform.

Stronger neutrality legislation, taking the profits out of war, and "a defense policy based upon a defense of our soil from invasion and not of our interests abroad" were specified.

Representative Caroline O'Day, chairman of the Committee of Fourteen Women, said peace was put first because most Democratic women wrote demanding that it be made paramount.

She hinted at planks which perhaps may follow by naming other subjects most stressed in letters from all sections of the country—for strengthening the social security act, for the child labor amendment, for greater recognition of women in the party and in public service, and for repeal of a clause of the economy act barring a woman from Government employment if her husband is a Government worker.

"Personally, I think it's terrible to have a defense appropriation of a billion and a half next year, while the Department of State, our first line of defense, has only thirteen million," Mrs. O'Day said.

Members of the committee are: Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey; Emily Newell Blair, of Missouri; Miss Harriet Elliott, of North Carolina; Lavinia Engle, of Maryland; Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri; Mrs. Burton W. Musser, of Utah; Miss Jo Coffin, assistan Government printer; Louise Galleher, of Virginia; Miss Annette Abbott Adams, of California; Mrs. Thomas McAllister, of Michigan; Mrs. Ben Kizer, of Washington; Mrs. H. M. Lamberton, jr., of Minnesota; Mrs. Carl Pryor, of Iowa.

'Postage Due' Letter Sent Farley; He Pays

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP).—A special delivery letter addressed to Postmaster General James A. Farley ran afoul postoffice regulations.

"Boss," said a messenger to the desk clerk at the hotel headquarters of the Democratic National Committee, "I've got a letter for Mr. Farley, but this letter needs a 3-cent stamp."

The clerk looked exasperated.

"You mean to tell me," he asked, "that the Postmaster General can't get this letter without the stamp?"

"Those are my orders."

"All right," said the clerk, handing the messenger 3 pennies and charging them to Mr. Farley's account.

Alternate for Smith Ready to Back Roosevelt

New York, June 22 (AP).—There were 28 alternates, but only 27 delegates, when the Tammany Hall special pulled out of Pennsylvania Station for Philadelphia today.

The extra alternate was Bert Stand, secretary of the wigwam, who will vote in place of Delegate Alfred E. Smith if the latter is absent when the roll is called at the Democratic National Convention.

"Tammany Hall is for Roosevelt unanimously," Stand said.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 22.—Led by Senator Millard E. Tydings, the Maryland delegation to the Democratic National Convention, numbering 95, including alternates, arrived in Philadelphia tonight joyous over the solution of their seating problem. All 95—it developd today that only 47 alternates had been selected whereas it had been intended to select 98—will be seated on the convention floor.

The delegates, after stowing their luggage in their rooms at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, started a round of calls on friends from other States and to see the sights of this convention town. They declined to discuss serious political matters tonight.

The delegation, however, will turn its attention to serious business tomorrow morning when it holds a caucus to select its representatives on the various convention committees. Senator Tydings already has been selected as chairman of the delegation. Senator George L. Radcliffe is slated to be the Maryland member of the resolutions committee.

Other selections had not been determined tonight.

Montgomery County Democrats who arrived tonight included State Senator Stedman Prescott and Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, both delegates, and Emory Bogley, Mrs. Charles Roche and Mrs. Charles Latimer.

Prince Georges County Democrats included Lansdale F. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate, and Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles, both delegates, and Mrs. Sasscer, Mrs. Welles, Collector of Internal Revenue and Mrs. J. Hampton Magruder, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, Kent Mullikin, Mrs. Daisy Lacompidan and Mrs. Frances McFadden.

Nazis Ban Quints' Film.

Paris, June 22 (AP).—Germany has placed a ban on the motion picture, "The Country Doctor," starring the Dionne quintuplets, the Paris Tagezeitung reported today. The ban resulted from participation of non-Aryans in producing the picture, the newspaper declared.

Mrs. Roosevelt Presents Medal

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 22 (AP).—Mrs. Roosevelt presented the Chi Omega Sorority national achievement award today to Dr. Alice Hamilton, research expert.

The presentation banquet concluded the first day of the sorority's annual convention.

Dr. Hamilton, a former member of the faculty at Harvard Medical School, has gained wide recognition in industrial poisoning research.

Mrs. Roosevelt represents the field of public affairs on the committee of the national achievement award, a gold medal given annually to an American woman for public accomplishment.

Mrs. Roosevelt planned to go tomorrow to Arthurdale to attend the opening of a factory at a homestead project.

Democracy Urged Before Governors

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP).—In the room where the Constitution was adopted, Philadelphia's Republican mayor tonight told governors attending the Democratic convention that the Nation must protect "our basic system of government."

Speaking in Independence Hall at a reception for visiting governors, Mayor S. Davis Wilson asserted that the remarkable advances of America in the last 150 years were based on the precepts of constitution.

"They are precepts to which all true Americans will adhere with loyal fervor to the end of time," he said. "Here democracy sits enthroned upon foundations firm and secure. Let nothing undermine or uproot those foundations."

Ely Awaits Bid To Plead Cause Of Gov. Landon

Will Stump for Kansan, He Says in 'Taking Walk' From Democrats.

By the United Press.

Westfield, Mass., June 22.—Former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts revealed tonight he definitely has "taken a walk" from the Democratic Party and, regardless of what happens at the National Convention at Philadelphia, will stump for Gov. Alf M. Landon "if I'm asked to."

Ely said the decision to bolt his party and throw his active support to the Republican Presidential candidate was made during the day.

One of the New Deal's foremost critics, Ely was one of five conservative Democratic leaders who yesterday sent a statement to convention delegates at Philadelphia urging them to repudiate President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

"You can say that I have definitely 'taken a walk' from the party and will support Landon," Ely told the United Press. "I think Landon has the best principles of any of the candidates and I shall cast my vote for the 'hayseeds from the prairie States.'"

He said he would do his campaigning in New England if asked to stump for Gov. Landon.

Asked how he stood on Representative William Lemke's Presidential candidacy on the Union Party ticket, the former Massachusetts Governor replied, "I have nothing to say on that score."

Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, who joined Smith and three other cnoservative Democrats in urging Mr. Roosevelt be "put aside," indicated in Kansas City that he may take the stump against the New Deal.

"I expect to deliver some speeches on my own account," he said, when asked if there was a chance he would support the Landon-Knox or Lemke tickets. Read has declared repeatedly he would not support the Administration.

Notification July 23.

Topeka, Kans., June 22 (AP).—On the broad steps of the Kansas State Capitol Gov. Alf M. Landon will be notified that he is the Republican Presidential nominee July 23 in a ceremony that formally will launch his campaign.

The Governor said today his acceptance speech, tentatively set for 8 p. m., Central standard time, would be made shortly before he starts his first speaking tour of the East. The initial address of his tour probably will be at West Middlesex, Pa., his birthplace.

In response to press conference inquiries, Gov. Landon said he had no coment on the anti-Roosevelt statement of Alfred E. Smith and four associates, but he made this observation:

"The line of demarcation between fealty to party and loyalty to country is something for each citizen to determine for himself."

The Governor also announced that he would confer here July 9 with Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, on "the farm problem as well as other phases of the national campaign."

Col. Robert McCormick, Chicago publisher, came here by chartered plane to confer at luncheon with the Governor. On departing Col. Cormick said in an interview that he believed the third party movement, with Representative William Lemke as its Presidential candidate, would draw the bulk of its support from Democratic ranks.

It had not been determined today whether Representative Bertrand Snell, chairman of the National Convention Committee on notification would make the notification speech. At the Governor's office attaches said Snell might not be able to attend, due to conflict with vacation arrangements.

A research staff is gathering material which the Governor and his aids will draft into the acceptance address while he is on vacation at Estes Park, Colo., where he and his family will go Wednesday.

Six Cabinet Aids Delegates at Rally

By the Associated Press.

Six members of President Roosevelt's "official family"—the Cabinet—will appear in the role of voting delegates at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

The remaining four Cabinet members are not delegates. Three of them said today they would be on the sidelines at least during part of the convention that is scheduled to nominate the President for a second term.

The six delegate-Cabineteers are: Postmaster General Farley, attending as national chairman; Attorney General Cummings, veteran of political campaigns, who will lead the 16 votes from his home State of Connecticut; Secretary Hull, delegate at large from Tennessee; Secretary Dern, delegate from Utah; Secretary Roper, one of the six delegates from the District of Columbia, and Secretary Ickes, delegate at large from Illinois.

Those expecting to attend as spectators include Secretaries Morgenthau and Perkins, both from New York, and Wallace, who recently changed his Iowa voter's designation from Republican to Democratic.

Secretary Swanson, 74-year-old Virginian, will be unable to attend because of a serious illness from which he is recovering.

Farley's Gavel Bangs 3 Times, Meeting's Over

Democracy's Mighty Men March Up the Stairs, Then Down Again.

By the United Press.

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 22.—Chairman James Aloysius Farley put on his gavel-banging suit today and called an all-important meeting of the Democratic National Committee to consider momentous preconvention questions.

The chairman looked handsome in his brown ensemble with pink shirt and pate to blend as he waited with gavel in hand for the biggest of Democratic big-wigs to assemble in an oak-paneled and leaded-glass windowed conference room.

In with these mighty men of Democracy streamed a lot of folks to see what they could see. Farley pounded his mallet and announced the room was so crowded maybe everybody had better go upstairs to the ballroom.

The conferees trooped one flight up to a vast modernistic chamber, done in pink and white marble. Big signs said "No Smoking," but that didn't bother the Democratic committeemen.

Flanked by Cannon, Morgan.

Clearing his throat, Farley said he thought that maybe everybody in Philadelphia would be entirely satisfied with the way the convention is handled. Then Secretary Morgan called the roll. There was some little argument about who was supposed to be representing Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky, but Farley settled that with one gavel whack.

A fellow with a yellow badge lugged in a microphone for Farley to talk into, but the chairman was no match for the carpenter driving some nails down the hall. A messenger with a purple badge scooted out to silence Farley's opposition.

Names Committees.

When the Democrats could hear pins, Farley said there were con- a pin drop, if there had been any tests about the seats of the delegates from Minnesota, the Canal Zone and Puerto Rico. He said he guessed he'd better appoint some committees to consider these situations and did so.

Morgan thereupon urged everybody to see the New Deal's exhibition of Federal activities next door. He said it was the finest show of its kind ever gathered under one roof.

Farley rose again and said, ha-ha-ha, he understood, ha-ha-ha, that all the Democrats were satisfied about their tickets to the convention. All the Democrats laughed, too, but their joy rang hollow.

Roosevelt to Attend Rally at Charlotte

Charlotte, N. C., June 22 (AP).—Haywood Robbins, jr., of Charlotte, chairman of a committee arranging for a seven-State Democratic rally here, said today he had been advised President Roosevelt would attend. The date, he said, will be between September 8 and September 12.

Some time ago, White House sources said the President planned to attend the "Green Pastures Rally," as the gathering has been designated, but at that time it could not be determined what date would be acceptable to him.

Pivotal States of 1932 In Front Seats in 1936

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP).—Delegates from Texas and California, the States which swung the 1932 Democratic Convention to Franklin D. Roosevelt at the crucial point, have front-row seats at this year's conclave.

The Texas delegation of 100 will be to the right of Joseph T. Robinson, the permanent chairman, as he presides over the Roosevelt-renominating convention. Forty-eight Californians will be just across the aisle from them.

Both States were pledged to John N. Garner for President four years ago. They turned to Roosevelt when he needed the votes and Garner was nominated for Vice President.

Virginia Stand For Two-Thirds Rule Expected

Mrs. Watts Opposes Change to Majority Selection, Joins Byrd, Peery.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 22.—There were strong indications today that the weight of the Virginia delegation in the National Democratic Convention would be thrown against National Chairman James A. Farley's proposal to abrogate the two-thirds rule.

Mrs. R. C. Watts, of Lynchburg, Virginia's national committeewoman, asserted her opposition to the proposal to abandon the century-old rule requiring two-thirds of the convention's votes to nominate a Presidential candidate.

Her statement lined her up with both Senator Harry Flood Byrd, the national committeeman from Virginia, and Gov. George C. Peery, who have said it would be in the interest of the South to fight the proposal and asserted their opposition to a change of a simple majority requirement.

From these announcements, coupled with the prediction today by State Chairman J. Murray Hooker that "harmony will mark Virginia caucuses," most of the delegation's early arrivals drew the inference that the Old Dominion's 54 delegates with 22 convention votes would present a solid front against the abrogation proposal.

While bound under State convention resolutions to support the Administration in the convention, the Virginia delegation is free to do what it will about the two-thirds rule. The State platform dealt only in general terms with governmental policies and made no reference to party rules.

Hooker said the matter probably will come before the initial Virginia caucus tomorrow, immediately before the convention opening. The caucus had been scheduled for tonight, but was postponed because of the tardiness in delegation arrivals.

Hooker was the first delegate to arrive and register. He was followed closely by State Senators Aubrey Weaver, of Front Royal, and Robert W. Daniel, Brandon, and Mrs. Watts, who arrived in time for the national committee meeting this morning.

Senator Byrd and Senator Carter Glass were not due in until later.

Hooker said he expected Senator Glass to have his usual place as the Virginia member on the resolutions committee.

Mrs. John Galleher, wife of the Virginia National Emergency Council director, of Leesburg, arrived in her capacity as national vice president of the Young Democrats and was assigned to the advisory committee of 14 women named to whip into shape the proposed women's plans for the new platform.

Democrat Run-Off In Florida Today

Jacksonville, Fla., June 22 (AP).—Florida Democrats will nominate candidates for Governor and two Congressional seats tomorrow in a run-off primary.

Raleigh Petteway, Tampa Criminal Court judge, and Fred P. Cone, Lake City banker, farmer and lawyer, seek the Democratic nomination for Governor. They finished first and second, respectively, in the unprecedented field of 14 primary candidates.

Representative R. A. Green, of Starke, and W. J. Sears, of Jacksonville, seek the Congressional nomination in the Second District. Green, high man among five in the first primary, is the incumbent. Sears, Florida's present Congressman at large, lost his position when the Legislature redistricted the State.

Joe Hendricks, of DeLand, and W. J. Steed, of Kissimmee, two young lawyers, are after the Congressional nomination in the new Fifth District, the citrus belt.

Landon Will Address Fraternity by Phone

Cleveland, June 22 (AP).—Eugene Carr, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the national convention of Phi Gamma Delta, intercollegiate social fraternity, announced today Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, Republican Presidential nominee, will address the convention next Friday by long-distance telephone. Carr said it would be a five-minute talk.

D. C. Groups Honor 4-H Club Delegates

Youth of Washington last night honored youth from all over the Nation—gathered here for the annual 4-H Club encampment—at Sylvan Theater in a program of entertainment which lasted more than two hours.

The Girl Reserves Glee Club, musical groups from the Boys Club, the Usda Orchestra and the Washington Community Players participated in the program.

The 158 delegates to the encampment were addressed yesterday morning by Dr. M. V. Zegler, of the United States Public Health Service, who urged the boys and girls to take precautions against illness and safeguard their health.

"It is the most important form of conservation we have," he said, far more important than soil conservation or forest conservation."

The encampment will last through Wednesday and the boys and girls who came here last Thursday will break camp on the Washington Monument Grounds Thursday morning.

Johnson and Wife Reported Better

Mrs. Hiram W. Johnson, wife of the California Senator, whose left arm was fractured in a fall at her home last Friday, is recovering rapidly, her physician, Dr. Curtis Lee Hall, announced yesterday.

She will be taken back to her residence at 122 Maryland avenue northeast, in a day or so, Dr. Hall said. Since the accident she has been a patient at Emergency Hospital.

Senator Johnson, who has been confined to his residence with the grip, also is much better and able to be about. The couple's son, Hiram W. Johnson, jr., arrived here to be with his parents early Sunday, after a plane trip from California.

Roosevelt Drafts Planks

Vinson coal control bill had not changed his attitude toward the coming campaign.

As evidence of this the shaggy-haired mine leader renewed his pledge of 400,000 votes for the Roosevelt-Garner ticket. Of Roosevelt's platform plans, he said:

"I am entirely in accord with the things which the President has in mind and I am eminently satisfied with the policies that he proposes to expound. I shall support his re-election to the fullest."

He added that he and the President had talked over possible labor planks in the party platform, and also the situation in the coal fields.

Other White House conferees yesterday reflected the same unconcern expressed by Democratic leaders at the convention toward the threatened conservative bolt, announced the day before in Philadelphia.

Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, emerging after a short visit, said he believed Al Smith's defiant message to the Democratic Convention would lure a few votes, "but the party is sure of enough votes to spare those and many more."

Honored by Party.

"I hope Smith," he added, "and those other gentlemen will remain in the party. It is inconceivable to me that they will bolt, for the party has honored them greatly."

Other callers included Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Govs. Berry and Welford of South and North Dakota. Accompanied by Hopkins, Senator Nye and Resettlement Administrator Rexford Guy Tugwell, the latter called to discuss the drought situation in their States and appeal for relief funds.

In answer to a question of whether he intended to bolt the Republican Party in the coming campaign, Nye retorted:

"The air is full of bolts. Right now I'm giving my attention to the drought, which is more important to me than politics."

Pressed for time because of the nearness of t convention, President Roosevelt also concentrated on his acceptance speech and on clearing his desk of the pile of bills dumped there by an adjourning Congress.

One of the most important is the Walsh-Healy Government contracts bill. A miniature replacement of the deceased NRA, it requires firms bidding on Government contracts to pay prevailing wages, maintain the 40-hour week, and not to employ child labor.

The Navy Department was reported up in arms yesterday against the measure on the premise that the 4,000 trades and industries involved in the building of battleships could never be persuaded to comply, especially since the business is not important to many of them.

He found a moment, however, to receive an armful of Texas Centennial red roses, brought him by the Texas delegation to the convention.

Efforts to Locate Body Of Drowned Man Fails

Harbor police dragged the Georgetown Channel for more than 10 hours yesterday in a futile effort to recover the body of Ralph Glassman, 25-year-old Veterans Bureau clerk, who drowned Sunday while swimming with a party of friends.

Friends with whom the drowned man was swimming told police he dived from the boat near Three Sisters Islands and is reported to have shouted, "I can't swim." He threw up his hands and sank in nearly 60 feet of water before aid could reach him.

Suspect Held on Coast In Smith, Jr., Extortion

Los Angeles, June 22 (U.P.).—Ernest Dehagen, wanted by New York police in connection with a purported $11,000 extortion plot against Alfred E. Smith, jr., son of the former Governor of New York, was arrested here tonight.

Dehagen, using the name of R. Hammond, was taken in custody as he stepped into a postoffice to call for a letter. He admitted he knew persons connected with the Smith extortion inquiry and said he was "anxious to go to New York to clear up the whole thing."

Victory Forecast By Vandenberg

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 22 (AP).—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg predicted on his return home from Washington today that the Landon-Knox ticket "will win in November with a minimum of 307 electoral votes."

The Michigan Senator said the appeal of Alfred E. Smith and others Sunday for a repudiation by Democrats of the Roosevelt Administration should be "of far-reaching influence."

"Jeffersonsians can find nothing in this present Administration even remotely reminiscent of the faith of their fathers," Senator Vandenberg said. "Millions of them will follow the courageous lead of Smith, Bainbridge Colby, Gov. Joseph B. Ely and others. * * * This is a coalition battle against a common enemy, and these patriotic Democrats should be just as welcome in the ultimate council chambers after next November's victory is won as they are in the battle line."

G. O. P. Artist Labors To Beautify Rally Hall

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP).—Herman Kosove is a Republican, but he is dedicating his artistic talents to making the Democratic National Convention hall "a thing of beauty."

Bunting and flags in abundance he loves, but in the convention hall he found they spoiled acoustics. So instead of miles of red, white and blue bunting, there will be a border featuring State seals, interspersed with clusters of silk flags.

"The Republicans in Cleveland set a precedent for simplicity," he said, "but this will go it one better. This big bare hall will be a thing of beauty studded with Democrats when I get through with it."

43 Senators in Lists Of Convention Delegates

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP).—Forty-three Senators—almost a quorum—are designated delegates to the Democratic convention here. They include Majority Leader Robinson, of Arkansas, who is permanent chairman, and Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, who is keynoter.

Boys' Club Groups Hold Outing Today

Nearly 3,000 youngsters, members of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs, and other boys' clubs throughout the city, will be guests at an all-day outing at the airport swimming pool today.

The outing will really be a picnic with all the trimmings, swimming, a luncheon and entertainment by the WPA-D. C. vaudeville unit.

The boys will meet at the Fifth Precinct Station, Fifth and E street southeast at 10 a. m. and ride to the pool in taxi-cabs. Billy Levy, manager of the pool will act as host.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, founder of the Police Boys Clubs, extended an invitation to members of the Washington Boys Club, Northeast Boys' Club, Merrick Boys Club and the Georgetown Boys Club to join in the outing.

Callahan Is Re-elected Duquesne's President

Pittsburgh, June 22 (AP).—The Very Rev. J. J. Callahan became president of Duquesne University again today, less than a month after he announced his resignation.

The board of directors of the university corporation returned him to office.

Rotary Called Link To World Friendship

Atlantic City, June 22 (AP).—Ed R. Johnson, of Roanoke, Va., president of Rotary International, told 10,000 delegates at the opening of the organization's twenty-seventh annual convention today that Rotary might some day be the only stable link of friendship between nations.

With the rapid growth of nationalism during the past few years, he said, it is becoming increasingly difficult for citizens of different countries to meet cordially under one roof, but Rotarians have "held themselves together."

Fourteen thousand Rotarians from 65 countries of the world were expected to take part in the convention before it ends Friday night.

'The Remembered Man' Suggested as Slogan

Philadelphia, June 22 (U.P.).—Mary W. Dewson, chairman of the Democratic women's advisory committee, produced a slogan for the 1936 Democratic campaign today. It is:

"The Remembered Man."

Asked who the "remembered man" is, Miss Dewson said:

"The man who used to be the forgotten man."

Lemke Shares N. D. Limelight With Langer

By the Associated Press.

Bismarck, N. Dak., June 22.—The Presidential aspirations of Representative William Lemke shared interest today with the attempted political comeback of former Gov. William Langer in Wednesday's State primary election.

Although Lemke is the Union Party's candidate for President, he seeks to retain his seat in Congress. His renomination will be automatic since he has no opponent on the Republican ballot. But observers promised to study his vote-getting powers as a possible measuring rod of his strength.

The question of whether his name could legally be printed on the November ballot as both a Presidential and Congressional contender remained unanswered. Attorney General P. O. Sathre said he would not rule on the matter unless an official opinion were requested.

Langer is seeking the Republican nomination for Governor. His opponent is Gov. Walter Welford. Both have been indorsed by opposing factions of the Nonpartisan League, which dominates Republican politics in this State. Control of league affairs generally is vested in the successful gubernatorial nominee.

Langer was removed from the Governor's office two years ago after he had been indicted on a charge of soliciting political funds from Federal relief workers. After three Federal court trials, he was acquitted.

On the Democratic side, John Moses, former acting Gov. Ole H. Olson and James F. Morrow contested for the gubernatorial nomination.

Headquarters Plans.

Boston, June 22 (AP).—A leader of the newly-formed Union Party said today plans to set up headquarters in Chicago this week were made at a meeting of party chieftains in Great Barrington yesterday.

The meeting and plans were disclosed by former District Attorney Thomas Charles O'Brien, of Boston, the Union Party candidate for Vice President.

Others at the meeting O'Brien said, were Representative William Lemke (Republican) of North Dakota, the third party candidate for President; the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, founder of the National Union for Social Justice; United States Representative Martin L. Sweeney, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Francis P. Keelon, a New York businessman.

O'Brien, an enrolled Democrat, said they also discussed the choice of a national chairman and secretary for the party and the election of a national committee.

Withhold Formal Support.

New York, June 22 (AP).—The Townsend Plan and Share-the-Wealth leaders smiled broadly today upon the insurgent Presidential candidacy of Representative William Lemke—although withholding formal indorsement—while the candidate himself faced difficulties threatening to keep his name off the ballot in several States.

The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, of the Share-the-Wealth forces, announced he, Dr. F. E. Townsend and a representative of Father Charles E. Coughlin would meet with Lemke tomorrow or Wednesday in Washington. At this conference, Mr. Smith said he would ask for a definite statement from Lemke as to his already announced platform.

After this commitment, he added, he would await developments for several days, "to watch Lemke's performance." But he remarked he already felt certain of Lemke's "great honesty."

So close is the bond between the two men, Smith said, that Lemke has accepted an invitation to speak "at the grave of Huey Long" in Baton Rouge, La., to a gathering of Townsendites and Smith followers.

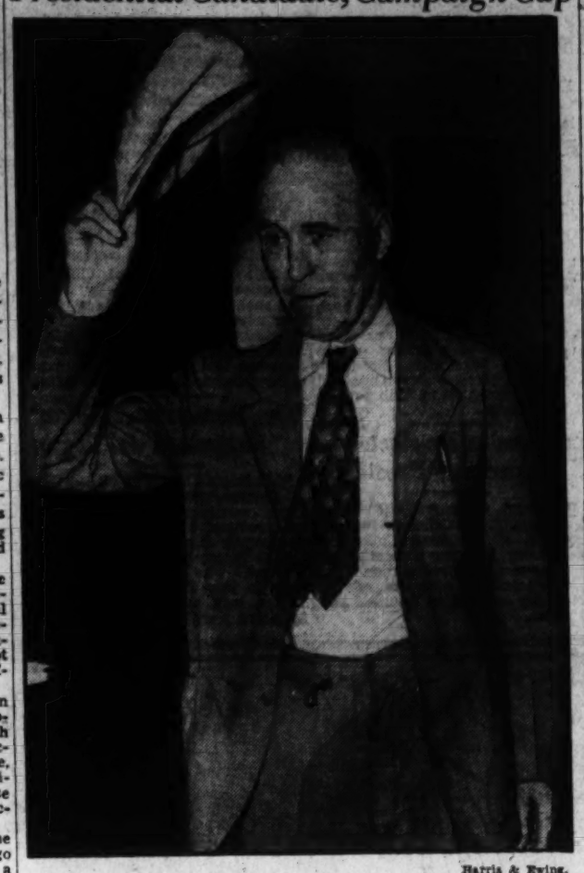
This speech, for a date not yet set, is to follow a mass meeting in New Orleans to which, Smith said, it would be "easy to call 50,000 people." Father Coughlin also will be invited.

Mrs. Clark Discouraged Husband's War Ideas

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP).—Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark who did some of the drafting of the Democratic women's peace plank, didn't get her antiwar ideas from her husband. It was more the other way around.

"I led him on," said Mrs. Clark. "When I married him, he stuck pins on military maps. But I think he got fed up on the war racket."

Presidential Candidate, Campaign Cap



Harris & Ewing.

Al Smith made the brown derby famous, but Representative William Lemke, Presidential candidate of the Union Party, contends that his old gray cap will be equally, if not more, famous when the election returns are counted.

Hamilton on Roosevelt

ing realism and an insistence that Government and leaders in Government be honest and competent," Hamilton said. "The Roosevelt Administration has not chosen to be so honest.

"The greatest indictment that can be leveled against Mr. Roosevelt is that he has allowed millions of men and women who want work to continue to subsist just above the starvation line while he pursued pet and peculiar policies of his own, which every reliable employer in industry and honest leader of agriculture continued to assure him prevented any possible increase in available jobs.

"A correction of this obstinate and inhumane policy is one of the first essentials of recovery and the greatest duty we owe the unemployed.

"To the fulfillment of that duty and a realistic solution of that problem the party stands pledged. It is pledged to a restoration of the merit system that Government officials may again be chosen on the basis of their ability instead of in accordance with their ability to deliver votes. It is pledged to the maintenance of a currency with a value based on something more substantial than Executive whim. It is pledged to a reduction of expenditures and a balanced budget."

After discussing further the Republican platform, and New Deal policies, Hamilton swung into campaign plans of his party.

"We shall not hesitate in the course of the campaign to point out some fallacies and failures of the Roosevelt Administration," he said. "We shall bring to the attention of our people Mr. Roosevelt's statement: 'The merit system has been and will continue to be extended during my Administration,' and at the same time the fact that the percentage of Government employes under civil service is the lowest in 25 years.

"We shall note Mr. Roosevelt's words uttered on September 14, 1932, that his 'farm plan must not be coercive' and also the fact that under the potato control act of 1935, the Kerr tobacco act and the Bankhead cotton act taxes, fines and even prison were provided for those who dared to produce in excess of the crops allotted by some agent in Washington.

"We shall recall his words at the time he accepted his responsibility as nominee of the Democratic Party in 1932 that 'for three long years I have been going up and down this country preaching that government costs too much' and, at the same time, reveal that the cost of this same government has gone up from substantially $5,000,000,000 per year in 1932 to $10,000,000,000 in 1936.

"We shall agree with Mr. Roosevelt when he said on October 19, 1932, 'our people and our business cannot carry its excessive load of taxation,' and, at the same time, we shall protect the fact that Federal taxes collected in 1933 were $1,833,000,000 and in 1936 were in excess of $4,000,000,000.

"We shall recount the fact that in July, 1933, there were 3,900,000 individuals and families on relief and that in July, 1936, there were 5,300,000 still on relief.

"We shall recount these matters and a thousand more similar in character in order that the people of this Nation for the first time in three and a half years, free from the poison pen of paid propagandists, may exercise their suffrage with the truth spread before them."

Thomas Sullivan, Coachman To Socialites of the 90's, Dies

Thomas Sullivan, 68, noted as a trainer of horses and a coachman for prominent families in the days before the automobile eliminated the carriage, died yesterday after a brief illness.

For several years he and his wife, Mrs. Mary Sullivan, had lived on the estate of E. W. Eno, 1771 N street northwest, as caretakers. Before that he had been a doorman at the Willard Hotel, where he won hundreds of friends distinguished in the Nation's life.

A native of Newport, R. I., Sullivan early learned how to care for and train the steeds bought by the socially prominent families there.

Before he was 21 he had successfully raced in trotting events at the resort city. Later he was engaged to drive for many of the people whose names headlined the society sections of newspapers back in the 1880's and 1890's.

Going to New York as a young man, Sullivan for a time drove a hansom cab, and was a particular favorite of theatrical folk in the willow-plume and Gibson Girl era.

He came to Washington from Baltimore, and drove for several of the diplomats of foreign countries.

But year by year victorias and carriages became fewer, and only a few "die-hard" aristocrats clung to their former mode of conveyance.

Sullivan never cared for automobiles and never drove one.

"I never wanted him to," his wife said last night. "I was afraid he would get hurt."

Funeral services will be held at St. Matthew's Catholic Church Thursday at 9 a. m., followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

John Rapetti Dies; Famous Sculptor

Weehawken, N. J., June 22 (AP).—John Rapetti, 74, sculptor who helped to mould the Statue of Liberty, died at his home today following a heart attack. He was born in Como, Italy. He was asked to help mould the statue by Bartholdi, who supervised the work on France's gift to the United States. Rapetti's name is inscribed on the crown of the statue.

Rapetti's Nathan Hale stands at St. Paul, Minn., and his Shakspeare is in Lincoln Park, Chicago.

Much of the ornamental relief in the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington is his, also the famous "peace head" in the Metropolitan Museum, New York, and "Nearing Home," in the Corcoran Gallery, Washington.

Survivors are a daughter, Emelie and a son, Arthur.

Mrs. J. S. McIntosh Dies at Home Here

Mrs. Elizabeth A. McIntosh, 62, wife of John S. McIntosh, a conductor for the Washington Terminal Co., died yesterday of a heart attack at her residence, 2330 Second street northeast.

A native of Washington, Mrs. McIntosh apparently was in the best of health when she arose. Her body was found on the floor of her home by two of her daughters late in the afternoon.

Surviving Mrs. McIntosh, besides her husband, are three daughters, Helen, Ida and Grace McIntosh, and two sons, John and Emory McIntosh.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 2 p. m. Thursday, followed by burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Dr. George Howe, Wilson Kin, Dies

Richmond, Va., June 22 (AP).—Dr. George Howe, 59, well known author of textbooks, for nearly 30 years head of the classical department of the University of North Carolina, died at his home here today.

Dr. Howe, a nephew of President Woodrow Wilson, was born in Wilmington, N. C. His mother was Mrs. Annie Josephine Wilson, a sister of the World War President.

He attended the Columbia schools and later went to Princeton University, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Later he pursued his education at Holla, Germany, receiving his Ph. D. degree there.

Hands of 'Healer' Stolen After Death

Grant Biddle, a cemetery caretaker, reported the grave of John D. Johnson, a Negro healer, had been dug up, the casket opened and the hands cut off.

Johnson treated pain by rubbing the afflicted parts with his hands. Police believed a crank with a superstitious belief in the healer's power was responsible for the desecration.

New Deal Loses Stay in Utility Court Contest

Citizen's Right to Sue Is Upheld by District Appellate Tribunal.

By the Associated Press.

The New Deal's effort to confine legal battles over the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company law to a single test of its own choosing received a blow yesterday in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

The court ruled that seven utility companies, which months ago brought injunction suits here to prevent enforcement of the act, should not have to wait for trial until after the Supreme Court decides the Government's test case against the Electric Bond & Share Co.

This reversed a decision by Justice Jennings Bailey of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, who granted an indefinite stay in the seven suits last January after Attorney General Cummings had urged it personally.

Although Cummings contended that a suit brought by the Government in New York to compel the Electric Bond & Share Co. to register under the law would thoroughly test constitutionality of the statute, the appellate court said:

"While we recognize the difficulty which confronts the Department of Justice in conducting the vast amount of litigation in which the various agencies of the Government have become involved, as well as the duty of the courts to be indulgent where possible in the public interest, yet the rights of the citizen are not to be overlooked.

"He is entitled to be heard in the courts in defense of his rights, if he honesty believe that they have been invaded to his damage, even by an agency of the Government."

The Government has 20 days in which it may appeal the ruling to the United States Supreme Court. In the absence of Attorney General Cummings, who is attending the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia, aids would not say what action would be taken.

Even if an appeal is not taken and yesterday's decision stands, it appeared that the injunction suits here could not be tried until next fall. The present term of the trial court will end July 1.

The act against which the suits protested was enacted last year at the urging of President Roosevelt. It called for the abolition of some holding companies effective January 1, 1938, but provided that two holding companies might be erected upon the system of adjacent operating companies.

In addition, the act authorized the securities and and power commissions to supervise the flotation of securities, sales of power and financing and operating methods of both holding and operating companies in the power industry, where interstate activities were concerned.

The injunction suits were brought by the North American Co., the American Water Works & Electric Co., the United Light & Power Co., the United Light & Railways Co., the Continental Gas & Electric Corporation, the American Light & Traction Co. and the Tennessee Electric Power Co.

Gain Reported In Employment Trend for May

First Increase for Month Since 1923, Declares Miss Perkins.

Employment and pay rolls in both industry and agriculture showed marked gains last month in contrast to normal seasonal trends, the Department of Labor and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics disclosed yesterday.

"On the basis of reports received from more than 135,000 establishments," said Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, "it is estimated that over 88,000 workers were returned to employment in industries and that total weekly pay rolls were approximately $6,700,000 greater than in April."

Miss Perkins said that such an increase for May had not been registered since the boom months of 1922 and 1923. Usually, employment and pay rolls decline in that month, reflecting a summer decline in business, she said. Part of the increased employment in the building material industries she attributed to repair work being done at summer resorts, which she said indicates resort owners expect a good summer trade.

"I have found everywhere I have been that there is an underlying steady activity,' she declared.

Widespread gains in the manufacturing industries that comprise the durable goods group resulted in a net increase of 1.9 per cent in employment, she reported. The May, 1936, employment index for the durable goods group exceeds the level of any month since October, 1930, and was 10.8 per cent above the level of May, 1935.

A decrease in employment of .5 per cent was shown in the nondurable goods group and was due primarily, Miss Perkins said, to seasonal decreases in the textile and leather groups.

Twelve of the 16 nonmanufacturing industries surveyed showed increased employment in May over April. Increases in the 12 more than offset the declines in the other four, and resulted in a net gain of almost 45,000 workers returned to employment.

Substantial employment gains were reported in private building construction, anthracite mining, quarrying and metal mining industries. A gain of 14.8 per cent in the private building construction industry was larger than in any May for the last four years.

Employment in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia showed slight gains. In the District, 1,058 establishments were polled and 37,463 business and industrial workers were listed as employed—a gain of .6 per cent over April. Pay rolls totaled $897,851, an increase of 1.4 per cent over April.

A poll of 1,730 establishments in Maryland showed 99,461 workers employed, a gain of .7 per cent over the previous month. The Maryland pay roll totaled $2,115,965, a gain of 2.6 per cent. Virginia establishments numbering 2,158 showed employment of 96,909 workers, an increase of one-tenth of 1 per cent over April. The pay roll in Virginia was $1,817,827, an increase of 2.6 per cent.

On the Agricultural labor front, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported gains in both farm wages and farm employment.

"A definite increase in farm employment of hired labor and an increase in the rate of wages paid this spring compared with a year ago is expected to continue throughout the summer," a bureau official stated.

During the spring, farm wages paid per month with board averaged $20.89 over the Nation as a whole, while in April a year ago the wage was only $19.11. The need for harvest hands will keep farm wages and employment up until the winter months, the bureau predicted.

Is New Deal Helping or Hindering Recovery?

ONE of the leading issues in the present Presidential campaign is that of national recovery. Voters undoubtedly will cast their ballots next November for the man and party they think most capable of realizing this goal.

Recently the American Institute of Public Opinion asked American voters this question:

"Are the acts of the present Administration helping or hindering recovery?"

Skowhegan, Me., retired business man; Rep.: "Present policies tend to give the people the right psychological viewpoint. It makes them think we're recovering even if we're not."

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

Wichita, Kans., insurance agent; Dem.: "Helping. Because by now they have restored confidence in the people in place of fear. Some measures have been bad, some good. Net result: Confidence."

★ ★ ★

Lamar, Colo., credit association president; Rep.: "Hindering. So many policies are of conflicting nature that in general they are hampering industry and consequently holding back recovery which, if it is to be lasting, must come from renewed industry."

★ ★ ★

Tampa, Fla., WPA worker; Dem.: "Anybody who gives a man a job is helping business recover. Withdraw the Government pay rolls and, boy, look at the small businesses that would have to close their doors!"

★ ★ ★

Plattsmouth, Nebr., feed store manager; Dem.: "Hindering. Too many people have taken for granted that the Government owes them a living. There is too much red tape and money is going into wrong channels."

★ ★ ★

Wilmington, Del., typist; Dem.: "Helping. If the President wasn't hindered in so many ways, such as abolishing the NRA and AAA, I think this country would soon be on its feet."

★ ★ ★

Los Angeles, Calif., tire dealer; Rep.: "Hindering. People don't care whether they have a job or not. They know they can get on the WPA if they want to."

★ ★ ★

How does the rest of the Nation feel about the effectiveness of the New Deal in bringing about recovery?

Read the answers in the returns from the latest impartial, scientifically accurate Nation-wide poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion. You'll find them—particularly significant this election year—

2,000 Delegates Pledge Higher Business Ideals

Are Urged to Apply Service Standards of Kiwanis to Trade Practices.

Two thousand delegates to the International Kiwanis convention yesterday at four business standards conferences pledged themselves to apply ideals of the service organization and the efforts of its 90,000 members towards improving business conditions.

The delegates promised to take an aggressive leadership to eliminate strife in industry and restore confidence to business, in meeting the challenge of unemployment, idle capital and deserted factories.

"America is a land of plenty and of opportunity," Harper Gatton, of Madisonville, Ky., president, told the business men from 2,000 towns. "We have the necessary capital, land, building materials, skilled labor, leadership and courage for complete recovery.

"We have seen year of depression, but recovery is here! In Kiwanis, new clubs and increased membership have brought power, and we shall bring the necessary co-operation to all elements of society for overcoming business conflicts," he said.

Representing every business and profession, Kiwanians will attempt to see to it that in their own vocations' interest will be aroused for the formulation of higher standards and ethical practices.

Business standards, it was emphasized, are not concerned with business alone, but must give attention as well to government morals and the advancement of civilization. "What society needs today is more co-operation between industrial enterprises, and all Kiwanians were urged to give leadership to such service work," Gatton stated.

"All clubs this year will follow the seven principles of a statement of business standards adopted by Kiwanis," Gatton stated. These seven are concerned with fair competition, honest business practices, support of new legislation and repeal of harmful business legislation, advocation of impartial arbitration, improvement of employment relations, reduction in waste of national resources, encouragement of long range planning in business.

Hindenburg Worth Proved, Nazis Hold

Lakehurst, N. J., June 22 (AP).—The German dirigible Hindenburg, fresh from a new record-making crossing of the North Atlantic, swung at anchor at an outdoor mooring mast at the U. S. Naval Air Station tonight, while its operators expressed belief it had definitely established itself in the transoceanic transport field.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran airship skipper, and representatives of the Zeppelin company in this country, declared the Hindenburg was a success and pointed to the capacity loads it has carried and booked for the future in support of their contention.

The airship ended its third westward crossing of the North Atlantic at 5:15 a. m. (Eastern standard time), 61 hours 25 minutes after leaving its German base and 32 minutes under the record it established on its first trip a month ago.

It passed over the station an hour earlier, but cruised about to come into its dock at the hour set previously. Conditions were ideal as it nosed down and the ground crew pulled it to the mast without difficulty.

Two hours later refueling operations were begun in preparation for the start of its homeward voyage tomorrow night, scheduled for about 10 p. m., Eastern standard time.

Black Legion Jury Jails a Witness

Detroit, June 22 (AP).—The grand jury investigating the Black Legion here sentenced another witness today to 30 days in jail for contempt.

The witness was Lonnie J. Holley and the sentence was imposed by Circuit Judge James E. Chenot, presiding. Chester P. O'Hara, assistant general, said Holley was "insolent and untruthful" on the stand.

William Moore, who has been questioned in the death of John L. Bielak, said by investigators to have been a Black Legion victim, was released on a writ of habeas corpus today and was taken immediately before the grand jury.

The police investigation centered on questioning of Whitney Fleming, 54, who was detained Sunday. Detective Sergt. Jack Harvill of the homicide squad, said he was seeking to learn if Fleming was the man who induced Dayton Dean, the terrorists' "trigger man" in the slaying May 13 of Charles A. Poole, to join the organization.

Boy, 10, Is Attacked By Bluejay; Falls, Dies

Guthrie, Okla., June 22 (AP).—Attacked by a mother bluejay defending her nest in a tree, 10-year-old John Fulton fell 40 feet to his death today.

"The boy had climbed the tree to look into a nest where there were some baby birds," said Noah Morgan, a farmer.

"The mother bird came flying back and darted down. The boy raised his hands to defend himself, lost his balance and fell."

Officials Deny Anti-Union Acts By Nolan Firm

Two Mechanics Testify on Discrimination Charge in Labor Disputes.

Recent charges filed with the National Labor Relations Board, accusing the Nolan Motor Co., 1111 Eighteenth street northwest, of violations of the national labor relations act by so-called antiunion activities among employes, were denied yesterday by company officials at hearings before a trial examiner.

The hearings involved two mechanics, Joseph Acevez, 10 I street northwest, and Bruce Luttrell, 1028 D street northeast, allegedly discharged from the Nolan shop after labor disputes.

It was charged that Acevez was dismissed after allegedly refusing to join the Nolan Motor Co. Employes Beneficial Association, reputedly an intercompany union.

Refused to Sign Paper.

Acevez, however, said he refused to sign a paper repudiating a proposed agreement between the company and the International Association of Machinists and was discharged May 13.

He said he never heard of the beneficial association before he left the motor concern. Saturday, he added, he went to work for a paint shop to which Nolan sends his work.

In a formal answer to the charges, the Nolan company declared the beneficial association had been "disestablished" at the suggestion of the National Labor Relations Board. Officials said they had no intention of interfering with employes who wished to join the regular Machinist Union, Local 193.

Charges Impossible Task.

Luttrell testified following Acevez. It had been charged that he was given an impossible task to do and thus forced to resign. In explaining his action, Luttrell said he had been given two hours to overhaul a truck job which normally would have taken at least three days.

Final decision on the charges was delayed.

Menwhile, David Kaplan, of the International Association of Machinists, said the local strike of automobile mechanics had now spread to 19 shops, with 350 men out. Striking mechanics, he added, are prepared for a "long campaign."

Army to Add Men, Gen. Craig Asserts

Springfield, Mass., June 22 (AP).—Gradual mechanization of the United States Army and steady building up of personnel and equipment is the aim of the War Department, Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, said in an address today before the national convention of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States.

"We feel that the minimum strength of the regular army should be 14,000 officers and 165,000 enlisted men; that we should have a National Guard of at least 210,000 and that we should have 120,000 reserve officers classified as active, with a like number of men in the enlisted reserve. Such a strength would leave us far behind other countries of comparative importance," he said.

Gen. Craig said it is hoped ultimately to provide each rifleman with a new semi-automatic weapon, to modify field guns, to permit high road speeds and increased flexibility of fire, to provide new modern anti-aircraft artillery and to install new modern equipment wherever necessary in seacoast defenses.

Electrical Worker Is Victim of Gas

Wade W. Fletcher, 30, an employe of an electrical appliance firm, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday a short time after he was found unconscious in the gas-filled basement of his home at 1707 Q street northwest.

Fletcher was found by Mark H. Webb, a roomer at the house, who called the fire rescue squad. Efforts to revive him were futile. Webb told police gas was escaping from a pipe in the wall from which a cap had been removed.

Mrs. Ottie Mae Kipps, owner of the house, said Fletcher had been living in the house about a week. Coroner A. Magruden MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Dr. Williams Dies; Expert on Radium

Boston, June 22 (AP).—Dr. Francis H. Williams, 84, prominent in production and development and use of Roentgen rays, and author of several books on radium, died today.

Dr. Williams was born in Uxbridge, Mass., and was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard Medical School.

He was a fellow in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a member of many medical societies in this country and Europe.

Kiwanis Hears Thorpe

Nation then "had he least government on the face of the earth."

"Many people," he continued, "seem to have short memories. They talk about the necessity for changing the 'old order' as if the 'old order' were something to be ashamed of. Yet when we had this same 'old order' we were leagues ahead of all the other countries, so far ahead we had to pass immigration laws to keep their people from rushing in here.

Cites "Alien Ideas."

"The only trouble," said Thorpe, "is that we didn't build those immigration walls high enough. Alien ideas seem to be getting over them today. But never since the world began has any political agency created an enterprise which made for continuous employment."

Gatton, the international president, called upon the entire membership of Kiwanis, 90,000 business men, to work "through intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizenship toward the solution of the three major problems today: Communism, unemployment and disregard of religion."

He also warned the members of dangers in provoking class hatred.

Promptly at 9:15 a. m. yesterday the Kiwanians got their convention under way, one of the most grueling four-day programs ever planned by a civic organization. Their schedule barely gave them time out to eat, yet they were going strong late last night in a fellowship hour.

In the course of the overflowing day they heard, in addition to the two morning addresses, a humorous speech by Roe Fulkerson, editorial writer for the Kiwanis magazine, and a fellowship talk by Gatton.

Sing at All Meetings.

They attended group discussions in the afternoon, talking over everything from getting people to go to church to raising business standards. And everywhere they gathered they sang, much as they do back home at the weekly luncheon meetings of their clubs.

Last night while the delegates assembled in Constitution Hall for a fellowship hour, individual Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States and Canada convened for similar observances.

Declaring that the organization has forgotten the material in the support of spiritual values, Gatton said:

"We welcome the problems that are ahead because we are united in a service that will help imppove the citizenship of our people, stabilize our government on an efficient but economical basis, support the spiritual aims of our churches, and supervise the development and growth of our children, privileged and underprivileged."

Preceding the fellowship hour, George W. Campbell, of Cincinnati, international chairman of music, led group singing and Fred C. W. Parker, of Chicago, presented the officers, past presidents, chairmen of international committees, district governors, and international headquarters' staff.

Roe Fulkerson's humorous address, "What's in Your Wheelbarrow, Mister?" followed the presentation of officers.

"An ancient axiom says that experience is the best teacher, but if that is true then experience has a lot of dumb pupils," the editorial writer pointed out.

"Men run for public office on a 'people's friend' platform, get elected and gyp their constituents right and left. Then they come right back again to those same people with the same old ballyhoo in the next election, gnding that the people have profited nothing through their experience."

"People dance," Fulkerson continued, "and have to pay the fiddler. Yet even after they are broke they go right back and dance again."

The secretary, in his annual report, presented at the morning session, said the membership of the organization is increasing and that Kiwanis is on its way to its former all-time high membership peak of 100,000.

Today is the lightest of the four-day convention schedule and is given over mostly to social affairs from noon on. This morning there will be addresses by Dr. John J. Tigert, of Gainesville, Fla., and Dr. Harry N. Holmes, of New York.

Tonight there will be 29 dinners for the Kiwanians, divided according to districts. A reception for Mr. and Mrs. Gatton at the Mayflower will conclude the second day.

Three Get Degrees.

Three Washington students received degrees at exercises at the University of Wisconsin yesterday. Dorothea Isaacson was awarded a bachelor of arts degree; Bernice D. Pitzer, bachelor of science, and Harry S. Shrayock, doctor of philosophy.

FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

2,000 Women Here for Rally Have Full Day

Wives of Kiwanis Attend Party for Mrs. Gatton; to Tour City.

Women who have accompanied their husbands to the Kiwanis International convention are having almost as busy a time as the men themselves. In addition to the elaborate program that has been arranged for their 4-day stay in the Capital, they are attending many of the business sessions of the Kiwanians.

Yesterday afternoon, however, they journeyed to Congresional Country Club for a reception and tea in honor of Mrs. Harper Gatton, wife of the president of Kiwanis International.

The affair, planned by Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, and her entertainment committee, included a fashion show along the edge of the swimming pool staged by Woodward & Lothrop, and an exhibition of swimming and diving by the Red Cross.

Today the 2,000 women here for the convention will have their own luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel with their own speakers. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, will be the ranking guest.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, will speak on "the Eternal Feminine in a World of Change" and Mrs. Edmund F. Arras, of Columbus, Ohio, will explain Kiwanis objects and objectives. Mrs. Custis Lee Hall will describe the Washington Kiwanis Club's work among underprivileged children.

Tonight the visitors will attend a reception at the Mayflower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gatton. Tomorrow they will gather with their husbands on the south lawn of the White House at 12:15 for greetings by President Roosevelt, and then the women will be loaded into buses for a surprise tour. The entire route is being kept secret.

Throughout the four days the wives of the Kiwanians won't have a dull moment. The hostess, Mrs. Albert Van Voorhees, has been to that. She has assigned assistant hotesses to the hotels of the visitors to serve as everything from shopping guides to sightseeing conductors.

Members of Mrs. Van Voorhees' committee are Mrs. Custis Lee Hall, Mrs. Edward Shaw, Mrs. Albert Howard, Mrs. Claude Owen, Mrs. Harry Field and Mrs. Sidney Seideman.

U. S. to Delay Acknowledging Italy's Victory

Suvich, New Ambassador, Accepted; 'Understanding' Reported.

By the Associated Press.

First definite indications that the United States, temporarily at least, will withhold recognition of Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia came yesterday from high Administration sources.

Announcing at his press conference that this Government had given its approval to a newly appointed Italian ambassador to Washington, Secretary Hull intimated plainly that the envoy's reception here in no way constituted American recognition of Rome's annexation of the empire of Haile Selassie.

The new ambassador will be Fulvio Suvich, former undersecretary of foreign affairs who is to succeed Augusto Rosso, the Italian government's represetnative here for the last 3½ years.

Cautious Phraseology.

Couching his announcement in cautious diplomatic phraseology, Secretary Hull said American acceptance of the new ambassador was not regarded as raising any new phase in Italo-American relationships.

It was learned in other responsible quarters that before giving its approval to the new envoy, the American Government had reached a definite understanding with Italian officials that his reception here would in no manner imply recognition of the newly proclaimed Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia.

This would be true, it was said, regardless of whether Suvich comes here bearing the credentials of King Emmanuel, not only as monarch of Italy but also as Emperor of Ethiopia.

Minister Remains.

The United States has not withdrawn its Minister resident in Addis Ababa, Cornelius Van H. Engert, who presented his credentials to Emperor Haile Selassie just a few days before the monarch fled the country with his entire government in advance of the Italian military, which now is in control at the Ethiopian capital.

Suvich for some time had been the chief power in the Italian foreign office while Premier Mussolini held the portfolio of foreign minister along with several other cabinet positions. Recently, however, Mussolini retired from that post and appointed his son-in-law to it.

Rosso, who is understood to be slated for the post of Ambassador to Moscow, has been in Washington since January, 1933, as his country's chief diplomatic representative. On two occasions before that he had served periods of duty in the embassy here as a subordinate secretary.

Church Party Slated.

Insurance Rackets.

Suspicious circumstances surrounding the recent deaths of several residents of Massachusetts mill towns have given rise to rumors that an extensive insurance "racket" is being practiced throughout the region. Stories of mass murders resulting from the practice of taking out insurance on the lives of strangers, and collecting in case of death, are probably exaggerated. Nevertheless, attested cases of persons who have met with violent death at the hands of those who covet their insurance are brought yearly to public attention.

The very nature of "proxy" insurance emphasizes the need for close scrutiny of the economic standing and personal relationships of everybody who is involved in a contract to pay money in the event of death. Insurance taken out without the knowledge of the adult insured at once creates suspicion of the motives of the person paying the premiums. Murder trials show how frequently these suspicions are justified.

Too often the less reputable companies are not disposed to probe very deeply into such questions as the relations of insured and beneficiary. While serious abuses are doubtless small in proportion to the millions of constructive policies that are written yearly, greater attention to the case history of the insured would seem to promise virtual elimination of insurance murders, known and suspected. None have more interest than the stable companies in stamping out all the abuses which tend to discredit an institution of such tremendous social and economic importance as present-day life insurance.

A Long-Standing Controversy.

President Roosevelt has ordered the Department of Justice to take "appropriate action" against four large steel companies charged by the Federal Trade Commission with collusive bidding, as evidenced by the quotation of identical prices on PWA contracts.

Coming on the eve of a Presidential campaign, in which both parties are expected to challenge the power of monopoly, a drive of this sort acquires a political significance which tends to magnify its importance. But as a matter of fact, the so-called collusive practices which lead the Federal Trade Commission to infer that the anti-trust laws have been violated are in conformity with the basing-point system of delivered prices authorized by the NRA steel code and voluntarily continued by the industry.

Under that system a number of designated basing points are established and freight charges added from those points to destination, although the actual producing mills may be located a considerable distance away. Through these uniform, fictitious freight charges, variations in prices due to location are eliminated over a wide area. When mill prices are also identical (evidence of collusion, in the opinion of the FTC), buyers find themselves confronted by identical delivered prices as was the case with the PWA.

The present controversy is merely an episode in a prolonged dispute over the basing-point system, which became particularly lively while the NRA was functioning. The system was introduced into the steel industry, however, a decade before passage of the anti-trust act of 1890. In 1924, the Federal Trade Commission ordered the United States Steel Company and its subsidiaries to discontinue the practice of quoting prices from Pittsburgh as a common basing point (the Pittsburgh Plus system). While the order was not fully obeyed, the corporation and the industry adopted a greatly modified practice, with provisions for multiple basing points.

When the NRA came into being, this modified system was still in effect, and was incorporated into the steel code. Subsequently public agitation against price-fixing resulted in attacks upon and defense of the industry's pricing policies. The Federal Trade Commission claimed that the code system encouraged price-fixing, was unlawful under the anti-trust laws and in conflict with its own order in the Pittsburgh Plus case.

On the other hand, the NRA officials argued that the basing point system was not monopolistic, although they admitted that it was objectionable in theory and economically wasteful in some respects. However, as Administrator Richberg pointed out, sudden abolition of a method of quoting prices of such long standing might have led to evils much greater than any swept away.

The questions at issue will never be satisfactorily settled by invoking the anti-trust laws and prosecuting industries for following policies that other agencies and departments of government have at one time or another approved and even encouraged. For years businessmen have been confused by the hot and cold, "yes" and "no" tactics of the Government. When the NRA was established the confusion actually grew greater because it was uncertain how far the industrial recovery act had nullified the prohibitions of the anti-trust laws. The abolition of the NRA leaves industry still groping, and the Government playing the old game of cat and mouse.

The way in which the steel industry and some others have clung to their codes indicate that there is need for a regulatory mechanism to take the place of the negative prohibitions of the anti-trust laws. It should be the purpose of a responsible government to devise a plan to provide safeguards against monopolistic abuses without resort to barren "trust-busting" tactics that solve no questions and make no headway against the economic forces sweeping us toward industrial integration.

Disintegration.

Whatever the claims for public consumption made by Chairman Farley, it is clear that the Democratic National Committee is by no means happy as the convention to renominate President Roosevelt convenes in Philadelphia. The political strategists of the majority party may summon a rather forced laugh at the ultimatum voiced by Al Smith and the other "quintuplets." But in their hearts they know that this manifesto is bitterly symptomatic of a crumbling front.

The raising of a standard of revolt by five so prominent Democrats is significant in itself. It is much more significant when viewed as merely the latest development in a series of cumulative effect. And within the past fortnight there have been three events of major importance in this series.

First was the striking unanimity of purpose, and absence of serious internal dissensions, shown in the steps leading to the nomination of Gov. Landon as the Republican candidate. Next came the launching of Representative Lemke's "Union Party," with its implication that the Roosevelt regime has lost appeal for a left-wing fringe with considerable political importance in the West. Now comes the Smith-Colby-Reed-Ely-Cohalan statement with its outright demand for the "putting aside of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the substitution of some genuine Democrat."

Under the circumstances it is not enough to point to the obvious shortcomings of this statement. If it stood alone, as an isolated event, it could be denounced for its ineptitudes. There is, for instance, something very thin about a reasoning which in one breath calls for the exclusion of foreign goods and in the next demands collection of debts which can be paid only by acceptance of foreign goods. But the attack launched by Mr. Smith and his associates is not to be regarded as an isolated raid, subject to easy liquidation by a hasty concentration of General Farley's shock troops. It is, rather, another sign of disintegration along a front too far ahead of its supports, too poorly planned, and with too many unprotected salients to be successfully defended.

Thus the Roosevelt strategy heads into the difficulties which have always piled up to overwhelm men who overestimate their own cleverness, and underestimate the quality of those who think differently. Thus the Philadelphia convention, heralded as a triumphal celebration for a conquering hero, is on the eve of its opening transformed into a panicky and uncertain conclave, with every probability that eleventh-hour changes in the party platform will in every instance alienate more voters than they attract. Thus a political leadership which has no principles to give it cohesion, which bribes its adherents and libels its opponents, begins in the time of test to go to pieces.

Mr. Smith and his colleagues could have made a much more effective statement. Indeed, it is not so much what they said as the importance of their following in critical urban districts which gives the action political importance. But, in addition to that, the attack was skillfully timed, and in the future may come to assume a historic significance entirely apart from the content or intrinsic value of what was said. For with this incident the Roosevelt Administration is clearly placed on the defensive, and on the defensive a colossal self-assurance is not enough.

Kiwanis Comes Of Age.

Washington is happy and proud that Kiwanis is convening here this week to celebrate its coming of age. Starting in 1915, as a businessmen's club in Detroit, it has grown to international proportions and now boasts members throughout Canada as well as in every State. This growth reflects the solid foundation and constructive purpose of the organization as outlined in its charter. Interested in "promoting the adoption and application of higher social, business and professional standards," it has proved a thoroughly constructive element, the more so because devoid of pompousness, partisanship or ostentation.

With about 90,000 members, Kiwanis has assumed an importance that cannot be overlooked by the world of society or politics. That this body of men has risen to a place in the community where its voice may prove a potent factor in national affairs is a sign both of its stability and its influential character.

The more powerful such organizations become, the more intense are efforts to line them up for this or that cause. Their value, however, lies not in partisan activities but in the concentrated power they lend to the good-citizenship aspirations of their many scattered individual members. By adherence to ideals which are above class or creed or party such groups best fulfill the intent of their founding which, in the case of Kiwanis, is toward the development of a nobler citizenship.

Japan Tightens Her Grip.

While the Nanking government and the Southwestern Political Council, dominated by the war lords who control Kwangsi and Kwangtung provinces, are making warlike gestures in each other's direction, the Japanese armies in North China have been given the order to march. On Sunday, 3,000 Japanese soldiers in full war regalia moved into Peiping, the largest contingent of foreign troops to enter the old capital since the days of the Boxers.

The pretext is obviously the stand taken by the southern war lords. Sending their armies north from Canton they had declared that these troops were intended to serve as the rallying point for a crusade against Japan. That this is largely bluff, that Pai Chung-hsi and Li Tsung-jen are much more interested in forcing Nanking to do their bidding than in doing battle with the highly trained armies of the Mikado, the Japanese fully realize.

They are also aware of the fact that Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking is far more inclined to head off the Cantonese armies than to oppose the Japanese juggernaut. No matter; just as some weeks ago the Japanese landed a naval squadron at Amoy, on the Fukien coast, ostensibly to protect Japanese lives and property that were in no sense threatened, so now they have reinforced their already formidable military unit at Peiping.

The presence of this new Japanese contingent in the former capital of the Manchus will, in the first place, constitute a due warning to the northern generals not to join forces with the war lords of the south. It will also enable Japan to proceed in due course with plans which from time to time have been postponed but never abandoned, to separate the five northern provinces of Hopei, Chahar, Shantung, Suiyan and Shansi and establish there an autonomous regime.

Some day, it may not be very far off, those five provinces may be forcibly joined with Manchukuo and Kang Teh, the puppet emperor who was once Henry Pu Yi, may return to the Forbidden City of his fathers.

In the meantime the presence of the Japanese at Amoy, only a few hundred miles north of Canton, places them in the highly strategic position of being able to put pressure on South China at will, while also dominating the vital Straits of Formosa.

Judicial Spoils.

President Roosevelt's recent appointment of three new Federal judges in the Southern District of New York, whose only known claim to preferment appears to be their powerful Tammany affiliations, has given rise to widespread complaints. The failure to consult the New York City Bar Association, as is customary, before making these selections, confirms the belief that the appointments have been tendered as political spoils to propitiate local bosses who benefit by having friends on the bench. Indeed the chairman of the judiciary committee of the New York Bar Association bluntly charges the President with using the bench "as a bargain counter for political purposes, ignoring the qualifications of the appointees."

The mere suspicion that the President is willing to bring the Federal judiciary into the realm of party spoilsmen is a matter of deep concern to the country at large. If the nonpartisan standards which have in the past governed the selection of members of the Federal bench are ignored to satisfy Tammany, they can and will be disregarded to gain votes in other cities. The protests of the citizens of New York who realize the dangerous precedent set by these machine-dictated appointments should be a warning to public-spirited citizens of other communities that their turn may come next.

A keynoter is a man one political party tunes up to harp on the mistakes of the other party.

Chesterton And Paradox.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

If Gilbert K. Chesterton were writing of his own death he would describe it as life. The great paradox of existence would be in Chesterton's view the one thing that is not a paradox. And for supporting data that this paradox is not a paradox he would have the cumulative faith and hope and aspiration of the human race.

Chesterton was like Shaw in using the paradox as a vehicle of truth. With Shaw the paradox is a flash. It is accepted as wit or perversity.

But not so with Chesterton. A seeming contradiction with him was not a contradiction at all. It was something to be proved logically as a straightforward expression of the eternal truth. It was his ambition to unparadox every paradox with a Q. E. D.

Like Shaw, Chesterton was out of step with his time. Shaw's dissent is better. Chesterton's was good natured and logical—so logical at times that it appeared he was really not knocking down current concepts so much as reducing logic to absurdity.

The Weekly Pass.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in The Post of June 20 a headline over the news item covering the change in rates of fare applied for by this company yesterday, indicating that the weekly pass is "abolished."

Our application did not attempt the abolishing of the weekly pass but rather the sale of a weekly pass at the uniform rate of $1.25.

The use of the pass has grown to a great extent during the past two and one-half years and we are very glad of the increased use of our facilities. We find, however, that it is necessary to increase the number of trips to accommodate the additional business and that the expense of such additional service is an important factor in determining the amount for which the pass can be sold.

The users of the $1 weekly pass are, on the average, paying only 3½ cents per ride, but allowing for the transfer ratio about 4½ cents per total journey. This is far below the actual cost of furnishing the service. I believe that the purchasers of the weekly pass are willing to pay their share of the operating costs and in justice to all concerned should be asked to do so.

A Canadian's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The dense ignorance of the opinion expressed by American newspapers touches the keen sense of humor of the British race. Never, or very rarely, is any voice heard which shows understanding or appreciation of world affairs. It may be caused by the German mentality so strongly ingrained in your country.

As copied into one of our Canadian newspapers your opinion on the China-Japan relations is typical of that absolute wrongness to which I draw your attention. It is, in part, as follows: "It did not occur to the British Tories who were inclined to applaud Japanese aggression that the conquest of Manchuria would lead sooner or later, etc." Does not your people realize that most of the trouble caused by Japan would have never happened if England had not unwisely given way before the terror and apprehensions of the Government of the U. S. A. of Japan's ambitions?

England unwisely broke up her treaty with Japan or Japanese history would have been far different Japanese comment at the time was: "England's mistake in giving way to U. S. A. terror will have far and regrettable results. Japan has been a faithful ally to England. The U. S. A. cannot and never will be a faithful friend to anyone."

Alas, how true! The marvelous astuteness of English diplomacy was defeated by that element which so futilely clings to the idea that the U. S. A. is at heart as sane as England herself. Never did England stand so high as now in her indefatigable efforts for peace, when the U. S. A., as usual, talked and sent oil, arms, etc., to Italy.

New Deal For Age.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Government and States are now trying to destroy that which they helped to build, the numbers racket, and similar rackets, by driving men between the ages of 45 and 65 years of age into these rackets by depriving them of their rights under the Constitution to earn an honest living, banning them because of their age.

Equal rights are unknown under the Constitution of this Government and it is time to face these facts. The only qualification there should be is to be mentally and bodily able to serve one's fellow man. We need a new deal for those men and women who have served faithfully in the past.

Those least able to pay are always made the goat through lack of means to protect themselves. What this Nation needs is a conscience capable of demanding justice.

A Bostonian View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The dichotomous dictator from Detroit, the Rev. Dr. Coughlin, has announced his candidates for President and Vice President as Congressman Lemke from North Dakota and Thomas O'Brien from Boston—prairie fire and Pilgrim pyre.

All the Massachusetts men with whom I spoke were amazed at the choice of O'Brien as a candidate for Vice President.

It was understood that former Gov. Ely sought to be picked after being refused consideration by the Republican convention at Cleveland. O'Brien is more available as a vote getter than Ely.

Both have abandoned Democracy, but O'Brien, repentant returned to the fold, while Ely remains defiantly hostile to the party which made him Governor. Lemke is highly respected by his colleagues, including those who do not agree with him on inflation. Congress defeated his farm inflation bill a few months ago. It was an earlier refusal of the Democrats to allow a vote on this bill, which stirred the impatient anger of Father Coughlin to language, exposing him to the danger of a debasing boot from the spirited New York Congressman John O'Connor. Both bill and boot promise to become issues in the campaign.

Mr. Justice Brandeis, the most liberal member of the Supreme Court, delivered a blistering condemnation of the Frazer-Lemke act, saying as he read the unanimous opinion of the Court:

"The province of the Court is limited to deciding whether the Frazer-Lemke act as applied, has taken from the bank, without compensation and given to Radford rights in specific property which are of substantial value. As we conclude that the act as applied has done so, we must hold it void." 295 U. S. 601.

Congressman Lemke graciously referred to Mr. O'Brien as a good constitutional lawyer, which will interest Boston people able to recall O'Brien's operation of the Suffolk County District Attorney's office during his brief occupancy. He will prove to be a good constitutional lawyer if he is able to upset the opinion of Justice Brandeis and his eight associates.

Distinguished Cats.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your touching remarks concerning "Gimme the Cat," of the National Press Club, in The Post of June 16, brings to mind the two cats of the San Francisco Press Club. They also have gone to their Happy Hunting Grounds long since.

But these two black animals could do as they pleased in the clubrooms, even to digging their claws into the upholstered furniture and into the woodwork anywhere. The result can be imagined, but nobody cared as long as the cats were happy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have observed, with growing uneasiness, that the $4,880,000,000 relief appropriation is usually referred to in the public prints, by speakers on the rostrum, and on the radio, as the $4,800,000,000 appropriation, thus lopping off $80,000,000. This serious error should be corrected.

While the amount involved is a mere trifle at this time of generous spending, still it might cause a miscue in 'Andsome 'Arry's calculations. That would be just too bad. 'Arry can still raise cain in a boondoggling way with $80,000,000.

"Partisan Blunder."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Republicans made a tremendous mistake in ignoring the request of the head of the U. S. Tariff Commission to appear before the resolutions committee at the Cleveland convention, and instruct that group on the proper kind of a tariff plank to place before the country.

How this very generous offer could have been turned down is hard to understand, seeing that Mr. O'Brien's knowledge surpasses that of all the economists of the Republican Party put together. The short-sighted G. O. P. leaders might have thought the offer was to entrap them, on the order of fearing the Greeks bearing gifts.

In addition they failed to comprehend why one of the pet henchmen of the New Deal should be embraced as an adviser on a matter wherein he is diametrically opposed to the basic principles of the Republican Party—very silly of them to be sure. If they had only been magnanimous and allowed the gentleman to appear and plead his cause, it is fair to conclude that with his great oratory and deep learning he would have made converts. All he wished of them was to accept his idea of putting the whole tariff-making power in the hands of the President and State Department—as simple and beautiful as a patent medicine advertisement.

Certainly a grievous partisan blunder was made and no doubt the Democrats in Philadelphia will do the consolation act by letting the scorned one write every line of their tariff plank.

'Silly Old England.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: They believe in silly old England that progress is made slowly, or not at all. We start out to make over the world in a hurry, and after three years, we find the state of affairs little changed.

They kick out a cabinet minister because he allowed private individuals to have advance information of an administration move. In the United States, speculators in silver stocks "guess" all important moves in our silver policy and nobody is investigated. Eh, what?

Religion's Destination.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Different religions are just different roads, all leading to one and the same direction.

Let everyone use all his energy to improve and help make his own chosen road smother, rather than spending time in endeavoring to tear up and destroy the way of others. We will then find ourselves traveling on this journey through life well able to appreciate the fruits of joy and the flowers of contentment that grow in the fields of understanding.

What's more, we have paved a way for future generations to follow.

Bag's Bottom Gone.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That optimistic optimist, James A. Farley, has said many times that the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt is all in the bag.

Well, be that as it may. He may have a bag (no doubt a grab bag), but since the Cleveland convention and the birth of Father Coughlin's "Union Party," the bottom of that bag has dropped out.

Maybe Mr. Emil Hurja will let Mr. Farley look through his crystal ball and see where the bottom of the "sure thing" bag has gone.

F. D. R. By Acclamation?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If at the coming Democratic convention the delegates will cut loose from former procedure, and nominate Mr. Roosevelt by acclamation during the first hour of their meeting, the dramatic and psychological effect will be tremendous.

The New PWA Art Trend

EXCEPT for a few who have always been interested in art in this country, vast numbers of people have had quite negative reactions to painting. An artist seemed someone who was, quite simply, "arty"—had long hair, bad manners and was disconcertingly apt to say things which would throw a bombshell into their world. There was always that association in their minds of the garret and the artist, and as far as they knew he was still dramatically starving there, and for all they cared he might well continue to do so.

But this idea of isolation is slowly wearing away and there has been a noticeable change of tone in the public's attitude toward artists in general, and painters in particular. In the last few years the artist has emerged from his cobwebs without long hair and has shown himself to be rather a regular fellow after all. This gradual debunking of the idea that the artist is a man removed from daily life is coming none too soon. His work is feeling the new release, and there are already marked signs of a real national trend in American painting.

Large group exhibitions are appearing around the country, such as the one in New York City sponsored by the municipal art committee, and the big show at the Texas Centennial. A multitude of people from throughout the Union will walk through galleries of the latter exhibition. They will not be the usual gallery public, but farmers, workers, townspeople from one end of the country to the other.

Department stores have done much in opening friendly and natural contact, and were among the first correctly to gauge the undercurrent of the new trend. In many cities they have organized exhibitions, opened departments of contemporary paintings, and have commissioned artists to decorate their stores with large murals, not commercial, but the best that could be obtained.

Aside from whatever one's political leanings may be incalculable opportunities for creation and development have come from the employment of a high percentage of all the young American artists under the PWA, or the Treasury Department art program. Almost every region and locality has had some touch with the ramifications of these projects. The murals in particular, to be placed in public buildings, will promote a new relationship between the artist and those about him.

So many more people see a mural than a single picture in a gallery, and see it so many more times that its influence approaches that of an advertising display. Painting in this way will come to be something familiar in the daily life of people and through gradual assoication be tied into the community.

* * *

Just recently in Washington a specially interesting exhibition of artists work has been assembled, and one which quite well illustrates current trends. Duncan Phillips, head of the Phillips Memorial Gallery, and an internationally known critic and collector, has thrown open his entire gallery to the use of a group of contemporary painters, many of whom are quite unknown.

The artists have all been working under the Federal Art Project of which Mr. Holger Cahill has charge. Such a national exhibition of contemporary work which shows an undeniable quality, and has the flavor of native artists with their roots in their own country, gives a formidable challenge. It speaks directly to those painters who, susceptible to European theories of art, have allowed their eyes to wander and have diluted their emotions with an electic, foreign art.

Mr. Forbes Watson, writing in the New York Times recently, expressed himself very aptly on this particular trend, when he said that the excuse of such artists for not absorbing and giving out an indigenuous art, was that they considered "nationalism only another form of provincialism." The precious little audience for a few recognized painters is gone; the doors are wide open, and the fresh air of new work, new stimulus, is blowing through, and there is a wholesome appreciation growing among a far wider cross-section of the general public.

In all the PWA pictures now being painted from Maine to California one feels that there is something in the work understandable to Americans; that the painters are not only expressing themselves, but that they also express a real sense of nationalism.

Wild Flowers.

Wake robins, skunk cabbage, lady's slipper, fringed gentian, harebell, buttercup, bouncing bet, Dutchman's breeches, shepherd's purse, Queen Anne's lace—some of the names of our Middle Western wild flowers are known to almost everyone. There are many others, however, with equally intriguing designations, which only a comparatively few persons know either as names or living things of field and wood.

For instance, the sleepy catch fly, Adam and Eve, the flower of an hour and Indian's pope, also called the ghost flower because all its parts are white. And there's the shooting star, butter and eggs, false mermaid, squirrel corn, lizard's tail, the green dragon, crane's bill, hound's tooth and toad flax; the hedge hyssop, virgin's bower, downy false foxglove and sundrop.

We owe our erudition on this subject to the "Field Book of Illinois Wild Flowers," just published by the Illinois Natural History Survey.

Democrats Are In Town.

Philadelphia, June 23.

This is not a really political convention in the familiar sense but a great carnival and barbecue to sound the ballyhoo for Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal. Theoretically the Democratic Party is meeting to select a Presidential nominee, but that, of course, has been attended to long before the gavel falls, and the week in Philadelphia will be devoted to self-praise, self-congratulation, enjoyment of the present and happy anticipation of four more years of political jobs and power.

Philadelphia, by nature a quiet city, welcomes the patriots with flags, bunting, electric designs and that air of excitement with which the inmates of a town where nothing ever happens greet circus day. There is a small crowd in front of the Bellevue-Stratford on one side of Broad street and another crowd hanging around the entrance to the Ritz-Carlton, just opposite. The people peer into the faces of the Democrats as they drive up to the doors, searching for those which they have seen in the movies and in the papers, and some of them are licking pencils and clutching autograph albums. Mr. Jim Farley, the old czar of the New York Prizefight Commission, never enjoyed greater glory and prestige even when he was dictator of the fight business with access to the ringside rows for himself and friends. A distant moan grows into a strident wail of police sirens, and Mr. Farley slews up to a spectacular halt at the Bellevue-Stratford under escort of the local cops. His importance, the urgency of his business and the firm determination of the escort to see him through are all faintly reminiscent of the routine comings and goings of Adolf Hitler.

It has been a long time, come to think of it, since the Americans practiced the custom of throwing escorts around honored visitors and rushing them through the traffic unnecessarily fast—just to make them welcome. For a long time, during the boom, when a city wished to compliment a distinguished guest the accepted thing was to permit the subject to violate traffic laws in spectacular fashion, with advance guards riding along in goggles and gantlets to roar at the taxpayers and wave them to the curb. With the decline of the Era of Wonderful Nonsense, however, that custom fell into disuse. Its revival now may be regarded as a subtle boast that Happy Days are Here Again and that the Democratic patrons are responsible.

Nor is Mr. Farley the only recipient of this special courtesy. Almost any Democrat with a badge is entitled to the same privileges, and the sirens are heard at intervals all day.

Of course, the Democrats have a more festive temperament than the Republicans and make more noise about their affairs even in the years when they are down. But the contrast is unusually shrill this year, for the unhappy Republicans had all they could do to raise a few whispers in Cleveland, whereas the patriots of the Administration have come to Philadelphia with money in their clothes and a swaggering, carnival spirit in their hearts. They have distributed some songs—mostly parodies of the old airs of the 4-cent songbooks of the little red schoolhouse—but these are not likely to be heard, being laborious and suited to the disposition of generations which are gone. If there is any old song whose spirit could be attuned to that of the Democratic convention, it is the one which went "Dough, re mi, fa, sol, la, si, dough."

This is the greatest experience that has befallen Philadelphia since Mr. Farley drove the first of the Tunney-Dempsey prizefights out of New York for political reasons ten years ago. They were having a world's fair in Philadelphia then, which was flopping like a stranded whale, and the prizefight drew several hundred sportpage journalists to town, whose seductive writings drew thousands of spenders with stock-market money which was almost as loose as the New Deal money of the present horde. The hotels filled up, and the howl of the motorcycle escort was heard in the streets far into the night as the visiting Governers and other members of that ringside class whom Tex Rickard described as the best people were tooled from speakeasy to speak easy in distinguished style. They have had a couple of Army - Navy football games and some world series shows in the meanwhile, but they were comparatively small celebrations, and the coming of the Democrats in their triumphant mood, with money to fritter away on pretty things, is a marvelous occasion.

Also, in the meanwhile, Philadelphia has at last finished the subway and the new Pennsylvania Station and swept away the clutter and debris of construction which disfigured the city for years and sent travelers on a wide detour to avoid the town. It is a much pleasanter city nowadays, and no doubt there still exist facilities for the entertainment of the patriots drawn in from everywhere who wish to give evidence of renewed prosperity and celebrate the rescue of the country in song but not in prayer.

There go the sirens again in front of the Bellevue-Stratford, and a man with a walking stick crooked over his arm is signing autograph albums. I am almost certain that it is Senator Wild Will Lyons, the old cloak-and-suit salesman and the taxpayers' guest in the Postoffice Department in Washington. The snake charmer goes on next, and then Little Egypt will do the kootch in the lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford, under the auspices of the Democratic National Committee. Gather closely, gather closely! Observe every muscle, ladies and gentlemen! The Democrats are in town.

Mary Roberts Rinehart

By William Lyon Phelps.

Her New Novel.

Mary Roberts Rinehart is one of the most distinguished citizens of the city of Washington, one of the best-known creative writers of America, and one of the most universally beloved.

She combines skill in her favorite indoor sport of English composition with her favorite outdoor sport of riding wild horses in the Far West. Her physical courage was shown during the World War, when she went alone into terrible places as a journalist; being exposed frequently to the dangers of gunfire, and to the more devastating perils that came from disease and horrible weather.

• • • •

Although she has been writing novels, short stories and plays for many years, in her case truth has really been not only stranger but even more exciting than fiction. For of all her works, I like best her autobiography, published in 1931, called "My Story." Here she unconsciously showed that she knew too much about the horrors of the seamy side of life to write about them in fiction; for some years she was a night nurse in the emergency ward of a great hospital in Pittsburgh. I do not think anyone—not even the youngest of our novelists—could tell her much about the brutality and degradation of human nature.

Yet instead of writing "Tobacco Road," she wrote "The Bat."

In 1915 she published her novel called "K," taking the man in white, the surgeon, as her hero. For in the twentieth century the surgeon occupies the place held by the knight in the middle ages, by the medicine man among the heathen, and by the doctor of divinity in the New England of the seventeenth century.

• • • •

Now in her latest novel, published a few weeks ago, she has used more of her hospital material than in almost any of her previous books, but used it selectively in order to bring out the character of her young surgeon and physician.

This is not only a steadily interesting yarn, it sets forth a problem—the family and social sacrifices that must be made by an ambitious physician. A great surgeon, during the years of activity, say from 20 to 70 years of age, often has to sacrifice home life.

This novel is called "The Doctor," and is published by Farrar & Rinehart, New York.

required last year to get the present $4,000,000,000 work program under way, few changes in the relief administration were needed in the new program.

In procedure borrowed from the old CWA, which Hopkins also directed, however, State and local administrators hereafter not only will select workers but will decide how many hours a month they must work and which of the $4,000,000,000 worth of projects already approved, but not begun, will be carried out.

Will Assign Quotas.

The Washington office will assign each State's quota in jobs and money out of the 2,300,000 job average to be provided by WPA during the 12 months beginning July 1.

This program, contrasting with the peak of 3,038,973 WPA workers at the end of last February, will permit only a few thousand not now employed by WPA to obtain jobs, officials said.

Greater flexibility in selection, however, will be possible to provide for some needy who under the present rules have difficulty in obtaining either work relief jobs or direct relief from local or State governments. Hopkins told State administrators to disregard his previous requirement that everyone be given a WPA job must have been on the role before November 1, 1935.

Although the new appropriation bill does not require that a person must have been on relief to get a WPA job, officials said Hopkins would confine workers to those now employed by WPA, to those who came on relief after November 1, and a few certified as "in need of relief."

Deadline Extended.

The previous deadline was intended to prevent local officials from seeking to transfer to WPA large numbers of needy persons not eligible for jobs. Officials said the same purpose would be served by the "quota system of jobs and allotments."

Ninety-five per cent of WPA workers were taken from local relief rolls, the remainder being mostly supervisors not available from those receiving the dole. Unemployed not on relief, however, are eligible for jobs on PWA housing and non-Federal projects and on some projects being carried on by Army engineers because of the shortage of skilled labor on relief rolls.

A total of 700,000 jobs in addition to those provided by WPA will be created by other Federal agencies financed with separate appropriations or with the $1,000,000,000 in relief money that will be carried over on July 1.

States Put Up 15 Per Cent.

Hopkins, who said on Sunday it would not be necessary to have old projects reapproved under the new appropriation, asserted States and communities were putting up $265,000,000, or 18 per cent of the cost of work now under way.

Value of work under way varied from $275,602,123 in New York to $1,608,085 in Nevada, and the percentage of local contributions from 41.8 per cent in Wyoming to 8.1 per cent in West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Turkey Parley Held Europe's Key to Future

Police Guard Conferees at World Conference on Dardanelles.

By the Associated Press.

Montreux, Switzerland, June 22.—Issues likely to have a profound effect on the future of Europe cropped up at the opening of an international conference today to discuss Turkey's request for permission to refortify the Dardanelles.

The question of the rigth to move warships and war materials through the straits, on which Russia is expected to insist, is considered pregnant with far-reaching possibilities in view of the new Franco-Soviet mutual defense pact.

It may have an important bearing on the foreign policies of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini.

Police Precautions.

Extraordinary police precautions were thrown about the conferees, following rumors of plots against members of the Soviet delegation. When the straits convention was held in Lausanne in 1923, a Soviet delegate, Vaslov Vorowsky, was assassinated.

Stanley M. Bruce, of Australia, president of the Council of the League of Nations, was elected president of the conference; Nicolas Politis, of Greece, vice president, and M. A. Aghnides, head of the League disarmament section, secretary-general.

Outstanding interest attended a report that Great Britain would propose making permanent guarantees of mutual assistance in the Mediterranean exchanged by Britain, France, Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia against Italy during the sanctions crisis but this time with Italy included.

Refusal Expected.

(Informed sources said in Rome any decision taken at Montreux without Italy's consent would not be accepted by her. Italy is expected to refuse to collaborate with the conference until the League has voted to lift sanctions).

In an opening exposition of his country's case Tewfik Rustu Arras, Turkey's foreign minister, said Turkey must be able to defend herself and that guarantees of world powers no longer operate.

He said Turkey would allow passage of warships through the straits so long as there was no menace to Turkish security.

Brazilian Trains Crash.

Rio de Janiero, June 22 (AP).—Two crowded suburban trains telescoped each other at nearby Triagem today, killing a woman and a boy and injuring 24 other passengers. Authorities called out police reinforcements to prevent rioting by indignant citizens.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Imaginary Interviews.

(Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Farley.)

Mr. Farley—Well, how does it seem to be the manager of a major political party overnight?

Mr. Hamilton—Whaddaya mean "overnight?" I expect to stay for the winter sports.

Mr. Farley—What winter sports?

Mr. Hamilton—You'll find out in November.

• • • •

Mr. Farley—I wish you luck, but I can't forget that you are an amateur.

Mr. Hamilton—The amateur hour in politics will become as big a success as it did in radio programs. The worst I can get is two weeks on the stage at Radio City.

• • • •

Mr. Farley—You must be pretty smart, at that. You certainly did dominate the convention at Cleveland. How did you do it?

Mr. Hamilton—There was nothing to it. I had a candidate who stood for simple bookkeeping and he was bound to be a sensation.

Mr. Farley—Do you really believe Mr. Landon is headed for the White House?

Mr. Hamilton—There is no doubt of it; the only thing that worries me is all those "Detour" signs your men are putting up all over the United States.

• • • •

Mr. Farley—It seems ridiculous. Why, a year ago Mr. Landon was an unknown.

Mr. Hamilton—So were Granville, DiMaggio and those Jersey quadruplets.

• • • •

Mr. Farley—You can't win, Mr. Hamilton. We've got the greatest slogan a party can have.

Mr. Hamilton—What is it?

Mr. Farley—A job for every man.

Mr. Hamilton—And three jobs for every chairman

• • • •

Mr. Farley—Say, what are Landon's qualifications for the Presidency? Why, he isn't even a forceful orator.

Mr. Hamilton—He is not a radio star, but that will be in his favor.

Mr. Farley—How so?

Mr. Hamilton—Things have reached a point where a simple declaration of hard facts in an ordinary voice will be the sensation of the networks. The public is tired of Mr. Roosevelt's air of supreme infallibility.

Mr. Farley—Even so, are the people ready for The Voice of Inexperience?

• • • •

Mr. Hamilton—If I were you I'd be careful of those wisecracks. You've already lost a lot of votes by hasty delivery.

Mr. Farley—You're referring to that "typical prairie state" remark, I suppose. I still don't see any slur in that.

Mr. Hamilton—How would you take it if somebody classified you as having been a boxing commissioner from a typical New York village?

Mr. Farley—Haverstraw isn't a village.

Mr. Hamilton—See! Right away you get touchy!

• • • •

Mr. Farley—Say, Mr. Hamilton, is it true that you are going to have Mr. Landon conduct a front porch campaign?

Mr. Hamilton—No. The hopes of the Democratic Party in that respect will be shattered.

Mr. Farley—I suppose the porch of a Kansas cottage in summer is a pretty hot spot.

Mr. Hamilton—Yes, but not so much of a hot spot as you will find the portico of the White House this winter.

Mr. Farley—You seem pretty confident.

Mr. Hamilton—It's the spirit of youth.

Mr. Farley—The Republicans are putting so much emphasis on the youth movement that I expect to hear any day now they will offer the Dionne quints Cabinet positions.

Mr. Hamilton—An idea like that could originate only with a New Dealer.

• • • •

Mr. Farley—Why your sarcasm about the New Deal? Don't Kansans believe in a more abundant life?

Mr. Hamilton—Sure. But we don't judge abundance by the number of spoons in the gravy.

Mr. Farley—Would you excuse a very personal question?

Mr. Hamilton—Shoot!

Mr. Farley—Well, in view of all this youth stuff, is that your own hair?

A Relentless Race.

The President has approved a higher tariff on zippers. It seems the Japanese are a big zipper race and are out to get our last button.

Add similes: as rare as a man who went to the Yale-Harvard boat race and saw the boat race.

"The loud speaker's announcement at the dog track: 'Here comes the bunny!'"—New York Herald Tribune. You don't mean "There goes Rusty," do you?

Sinclair ("Red") Lewis got an honorary degree from his alma mater, Yale. Wonder if he had enough sentiment about the old days to wander down State street where the Journal-Courier used to be when he was on it?

Bill McFee drew an Eli degree, too, and Prof. Billy Phelps exposed a chapter of the sea writer's past when he declared in presenting the degree: "This temperamental officer had charge, on the United Fruit Line, of what has been called the most temperamental of fruits; he had to control the engine, the crew and the bananas." The professor is understating it. Dr. McFee traveled something like 500,000 nautical miles and never lost a banana.

Eden Opposed To Recognizing Italy's Conquest

Britain's Parliament Hears Stand on Annexation of Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 22.—Britain's Anthony Eden, who will depart Thursday for Geneva, told the House of Commons today he would neither "propose nor assent" to recognition of Italy's annexation of Ethiopia.

The members of Parliament also heard from the busy young foreign secretary:

1. That a shipment of arms consigned from the Sudan to western Ethiopia had been halted for lack of constituted authority in that region, where Galla tribesmen were believed to have recognized no sovereignty.

2. The British government is without power to grant loans for credits to Italy, and does not intend to seek that power.

3. The British position on loans to Italy will be stated in due course.

4. His Majesty's government is "making inquiries" into reports that Heligoland is being refortified by Germany.

Eden, who last week announced in the house that Britain would take the lead at Geneva in seeking abolition of sanctions, made his statement on annexation in response to questions.

No Parley Planned.

Asked if the government would consult signatories of the Pact of Paris on possible action dealing "with the breach by Italy of her obligations under the treaty," the foreign secretary replied in the negative.

As for the arms shipment, he said Britain "could not take the responsibility for allowing arms to go across the frontier which might result in local strife within the (Ethiopian) empire without helping the Emperor."

In the event a government "responsible" to Haile Selassie should be set up in western Ethiopia, Eden said in response to an opposition query, there would be "an entirely different situation."

Eden, it was learned, will call on Selassie tomorrow before the Commons debate on the sanctions question is resumed. It will be their farewell meeting in London, since the Negus is leaving shortly for Switzerland. A spokesman said, however, the Emperor did not intend to attend council or assembly sessions of the League of Nations this week and next.

At Scarborough, the general council of the League of Nations Union, acting on the proposal of Lord Lytton, adopted a resolution urging the gvernment to propose at Geneva that Italy be declared no longer a member of the League.

Argentina Assured.

Montreux, Switzerland, June 22 (U.P.).—French delegates to the Dardanelles conference tonight assured Argentina that France is willing to support the "principle "of nonrecognition of territorial conquests," at the league assembly meeting June 30.

Diplomats said France indicated she is prepared to accept an assembly pronouncement which would reaffirm the principles of the League Covenant and conclude that territorial acquisitions by force are invalid.

However, it is believed that France did not express willingness to support a decision directly against Italy's annexation of Ethiopia, but merely readiness to support the general principle of nonrecognition on the basis of article 10 of the covenant.

On that basis, Argentina probably will attempt to have the assembly adopt a nonrecognition resolution without directly condemning Italy.

Plans Investigation.

Ottawa, June 22 (AP).—Premier King told the House of Commons today he would investigate forecasts in Rome that Canada would drop economic and financial sanctions against Italy.

Conservative Leader Bennett introduced the subject today. He said a Rome radio station, a full day before announcement was made in Ottawa, declared Canada was lifting sanctions because they were worthless.

The prime minister said he was unaware of the announcement from Rome, but would have the whole situation investigated.

Prime Minister King announced June 15, in the House of Commons, that Canadian delegates to the League of Nations would be instructed to support the move to lift sanctions.

The Conservative leaders said the Rome radio station which made the prediction was under the direct control of the Italian government.

Belgium Agrees.

Brussels, June 22 (AP).—The Belgian cabinet agreed today to support the lifting of sanctions from Italy, following in the wake of Great Britain and France.

The government also decided to associate itself with any collective accord of the Italo-Ethiopian question adopted by the League.

Coast Man on Trial In 'Snake Murder'

Los Angeles, June 22 (AP).—Red-haired Robert James, oft-married master barber, went on trial here today for the bizarre "rattlesnake" slaying of his seventh wife.

The accusation against him is that he thrust the bare legs of Mrs. Mary Bush James, an expectant mother, into a box of rattlesnakes, saw one strike then, fearing the poison would not kill her, drowned her in the bathtub of their home.

It was "a murder for insurance," the prosecution charged.

James' attorney, Sam Silverman, indicated insanity would be the defense. He asked each jury candidate if he or she believed "the best way to get rid of an insane man is to execute him."

Soldiers Slay 5 Arab Snipers In Train Attack

Two Suspects in Palestine Routed From Cave by Dynamite.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, June 22.—Soldiers and police, searching sun-scorched Palestine for fugitives from a Sunday battle, killed five Arab train snipers and blasted a cave to capture two accused slayers today.

The five Arabs were killed and two soldiers were wounded slightly during two attacks on a military-escorted train midway between Jerusalem and Jaffa.

In the second ambuscade, the troops were forced to remove a pile of stones from the track under the fire of the snipers.

Engineer units cornered two of the Arabs suspected of participating in yesterday's battle, in which the British Sergt. Henry Sills and a private soldier were killed and between 20 and 40 Arabs reported slain.

They found the pair in a barricaded cave where Christian martyrs once took refuge. Lowering dynamite at the end of a rope, they blew up the cave and captured the Arabs.

Police and soldiers, cleaning out a nest of Arabs at Mtebal, near Nablus, killed one of their number, arrested four others and captured a cache of bombs and rifles.

An officer was wounded slightly in the explosion of an old Turkish shell when a military trolley was derailed near Gaza. Military patrols engaged Arabs in brushes in the neighborhood of Abukebir and Beitvegan, both near Jerusalem, but no casualties were reported.

Police dogs accompanied infantrymen on the hunt through the hill and cave country for the Arabs who fled from Sunday's scene of fighting. The battle followed an Arab attack on a troop caravan near Anabta.

Italy, Reich Believed Planning Aviation Pact

Rome, June 22 (AP).—Aviation collaboration between Italy and Germany was predicted today on the bases of a trip to Berlin soon to be made by Gen. Giuseppe Valle, undersecretary of aviation.

Gen. Valle and other high officials are expected to leave this week for a stay of several days in the German capital. In aviation circles it was suggested there may also be a discussion of Italo-German collaboration in South American airlines.

It was suggested the Italian mission might discuss with German officials bases for further technical collaboration in Europe, but that a military aviation agreement was unlikely, at least for the present.

Texas Fugitives Take Auto, Release Driver

Columbus, Tex., June 22 (AP).—J. W. Cassagne, 60, who was kidnaped by Luke Trammell and Forrest Gibson, escaped convicts, near here this morning, was released at Lyons in Burleson County late today.

Cassagne said the convicts fled northward in his car.

He was not harmed.

Chiang Troops Reach Border; Civil War Near

By the United Press.

Canton, June 22.—Nanking government troops, under orders to suppress anti-Japanese forces in the autonomous provinces of Kwantung and Kwangso, advanced to the Kwangsi border today, the Southwest Political Council headquarters announced.

Movement of the Nanking army, estimated to number 300,000 men, threatened to plunge the republic into the bloodiest upheaval since its birth in 1911, when the empire was overthrown.

Leaders of the Canton anti-Japanese forces, recently withdrawn from Nanking territory to avert civil war after they had started a northward march to declare war on Japanese garrisons in North China, said they would throw the full weight of their well-equipped army against the Nanking troops if their territory is invaded.

Order Given by Chiang.

These developments coincided with reports that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, dictator of the Nanking central government, has ordered his armies to crush internal challenges to his rule.

Additional Nanking divisions reportedly are moving into Fukien Province for war against Kwangtung, and others have been sent to Kweichow Province to outflank the Kwangsi armies.

Gen. Chiang reportedly has had to cope with mutiny in the ranks of the Hunan Province forces. Unrest developed among the Hunan army when one regiment revolted and paraded through its garrison area shouting anti-civil war slogans.

The Southwest Political Council met today and adopted a three-point program on which it will base discussions with the Nanking government, scheduled for July 10.

Armed Resistance.

The points were:

1. Demand that Nanking immediately sever diplomatic relations with Japan and lead the nation in armed resistance against the invader.

2. Abrogation of all secret treaties with Japan, including the Shanghai and Tangu treaties (which ended Sino-Japanese hostilities in 1932 and 1933) and the agreement reached between Gen. Ho Ying-Ching, Chinese minister of war, and Gen. Umezu.

3. A demand that all movements for the nation's salvation be emancipated and that the rights of freedom of speech and publication be restored.

2 Killed in Disorders In Spain; Bombs Set Off

Madrid, June 22 (AP).—Two persons were killed and a number of buildings under construction damaged by bombs today in renewed labor violence.

Both deaths were in Sevilla Province. An employe in a funeral home was shot and killed by the owner in a dispute over wages and extremists shot a station guard to death.

Bombings occurred in Madrid, where a construction strike has paralyzed the building industry.

In Cebrilla Teruel Province vandals looted tombs in the public cemetery, emptying caskets and scattering remains about the cemetery.

Swiss Ban Speculating In Move to Aid Franc

Berne, Switzerland, June 22 (AP).—The government decreed heavy penalties today against speculators in an effort to defend the Swiss franc.

Speculators "attacking the national money or the national credit" may be punished by imprisonment or by a fine of 100,000 Swiss francs ($32,337) or both.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recently I had occasion to go into a book store in the Northwest section and behind the desk I found the most attractive and most wholesome girl in the world. Right away I felt she was my affinity and I knew she was the type of girl I should like to marry.

I am temporarily unemployed and frankly I don't have much ambition. However, I have always felt that if I could meet some nice girl who would give me a shove or a push, as the case may be, that I could accomplish almost any achievement.

• • • •

I have rented book after book, but it doesn't seem to do any good. The girl is friendly enough, but I haven't been able to get the conversation on a plane where I can ask her for a date. Tell me, Miss Haworth, do I have to keep on renting books forever? Do you think it would make any difference to the girl that I am unemployed? I could take her for an occasional ride and perhaps a movie. Frankly, I am very seriously interested in the girl; haven't the slightest wish to make a pass at her, and my only desire is to be near her and to talk to her. How should I go about getting better acquainted? How can I learn her name? All I know is that she likes beer.

TIMID TWENTY-SEVEN.

• • • •

DEAR TIMID TWENTY-SEVEN: Had you thought about writing the girl a note and handing it to her with the simple statement, "This is for you," the next time you take a book from the library? In such a note you might give your name, address, age, social and educational background, and tell her, briefly and sincerely, of your wish to cultivate her friendship. You might explain in the note that if there had been any possible means of securing a proper introduction to her you would have done so, but that under the circumstances you know of no other way. Ask her to deal compassionately with your presumption; to try to understand the sincerity of your action, which has not been hastily committed, and, if she can do so, to grant you the honor of permitting you to call upon her at her home. Ask her if she will write you a note, giving her "yes" or "no," and mail it to your home address.

• • • •

It is entirely possible, of course, that your admiration for the young lady is shared by many men customers of the book store; that her feminine attractiveness is one of her greatest assets to her employer; and that she is accustomed to diplomatically warding off the attentions of just such be-dazzled customers as you every working day of her life. She may have been the recipient of many mash notes, so called; many men patrons of the store may have asked for her friendship—just as you wish to ask for it—and for all we know she may be already married, engaged or in love. She may choose to spurn your humble gesture with a burst of righteous indignation. And if she does so, she will be acting entirely within her rights. But if you are convinced that she is your affinity, you will simply have to take a chance on finding out what you can hope for. And I can think of no other way of advancing your suit. I need not remind you, of course, that faint heart ne'er won fair lady.

M. H.

The Unbearable Answer.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The man I have been going with for five years—and when I say "going with" I do not mean occasionally; practically every moment we were not working was spent together—has informed me he does not think we are compatible and has no intention of marrying me. He was brutal in his method of telling me and I am so unnerved from the experience that I am incapable of thinking clearly.

• • • •

Obviously there is nothing for me to do but make the best of a very bad situation. But I would like your sound advice on one point in particular. He says he regrets the money he has spent on our pleasure; says he wasted it on me—and it was no small amount, I will grant. Shall I endeavor to give him a sum of money to try to repay him, since he feels as he does about it? He makes a very substantial salary and has an income besides, while my salary is a very modest one. But I could manage to get the money together somehow. What would you do under the circumstances?

IN DOUBT.

• • • •

DEAR IN DOUBT: Don't permit yourself to be baited by this man to the point of attempting to refund any money he spent in your company. He probably wouldn't keep it if you did; probably would welcome opportunity for returning it to you with further brutal comment. Some one has wisely said: "Silence is the unbearable repartee," and the best way to even the score with this man is keep your own counsel, go your own way, and make no rejoinder in word or in act to his unspeakable outburst.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The other day I received a letter from a very wise phyisician. I know that he possesses unusual ability and in consequence there are many demands upon his time and talents. His letter was a plea for a better understanding on the part of physicians and the public of the symptom producing antics of the emotions.

To emphaize his point he described the case of a young woman, aged 28, who had for years complained of indefinable symptoms. She had gone from physician to physician and had been subjected to numerous searching physical examinations. During the course of her wanderings two abdominal operations had been performed and she presented herself to my friend with a history of illness dating back some three and a half years. As she related her afflictions tears came into her eyes and she choked with emotion—displaying an overwhelming sense of self-pity. He described how he first made a careful physical examination to be certain in his own mind that no organic disease was present.

Disappointed in Love.

Satisfied on that score, he began to talk to the patient about her experiences prior to the onset of the symptoms that had proved so incapacitating. He learned that she had been normal, healthy, happy, lively, and animated—but that disappointment over a love affair had interrupted the smoothly moving current of her daily life. The more she thought about it the more the incident was magnified, and, instead of unburdening herself to some member of her family or to a close friend, she endeavored to readjust her life within herself. Failing in this effort, quite unconsciously illness was seized upon as the way out—a situation which would bring with it sympathy and solicitude as compensating factors.

Following this lead my physician friend was able to direct the patient's thinking to her former state of happiness and was sufficiently forceful in his attitude to persuade her that the solution lay within her grasp and that she could dismiss wholly the possibility of organic disease.

Call it psychotherapy or what you will, he was able to reshape the thought processes of this splendid young woman by helping her to find new interests. After discussing many possible activities it was decided that she should take up laboratory work and prepare herself for the many highly technical procedures that are carried out in hospitals and physicians' offices. She proved an apt and enthusiastic student and—as was anticipated—her symptoms vanished. There was a marked gain in weight and she is now her old vivacious self. The "job" proved so intriguing that the cause of her break some five years before paled into significance.

All of this means that disease is often related to personality and that it must be studied and evaluated in terms of the individual. The manifestations of disappointments, fears, loves and hates include every symptom known to medical science. Sometimes but slight stimuli are necessary to set in motion a long chain of disorders that are very real to the patient.

Old Furniture Made New

To make the sideboard, or "Welsh dresser," dig up that old kitchen cabinet, remove upper doors, stick wallpaper in "garden vegetable" pattern back of shelves and on lower doors. For sticking on the paper use rubber cement, sold in a 10-cent tube. Paint or enamel the rest a soft Delft blue. Curtains of transparent yellow Argentine cloth (or organdy) protect the dishes from dust. Smart in the kitchen or on that screened porch where summer lunches are served.

The bookshelf-table shown in second sketch is made from an old, scarred dining room buffet. Varnish remover, a dull putty knife, and wire wool took off all the old varnish, revealing the good oak beneath. Good wood is worth treating to a natural finish. Give it a coat of colorless shellac, followed next day by a coat of wax. Inferior wood could be enameled a soft-toned ivory, gray, or sage green.

For a buffet of natural wood, the shelves are smart enameled in vermillion, that red like a fire truck. Or use jade green or bright blue to suit room.

Jellied Meats Make Festive Summer Meal

By Dorothea Duncan.

MANY a delicious summer luncheon or dinner menu is planned around jellied meat or meat in aspic as the main dish. These lovely, sparkling aspic loaves from which peep cubes of cold cooked meat, fresh garden vegetables, sliced pickles or olives and sliced or diced hard cooked eggs have a festive appearance, and because it is common belief among many a housewife, especially the novice, that festive dishes are difficult to prepare, they are excluded entirely from the everyday menu.

But jellied loaves are worth consideration from a standpoint of economy of purse as well as time. Cold leftover meats, small shreds, for example, that can be used in no other summer dish to the advantage that the jellied loaf offers can be used for a number of interesting aspic molds. Then, too, the less expensive cuts of meats can be purchased and cooked especially for a jellied loaf.

The safest and easiest method of preparing a jellied loaf is to make a regulation mixture of plain, unflavored gelatin dissolved in seasoned liquid. The canned meat stocks are excellent liquids for this purpose for they are inexpensive and already skimmed of unattractive fat. These consommes, as they are called, may be flavored to taste with salt, pepper, celery or celery seed, onion juice and perhaps a bit of vinegar or lemon juice. The usual proportion of 1 tablespoon gelatin to 1 pint of liquid should be increased 1½ or 2 times for a firm, sliceable loaf. And remember, that every tablespoon of vinegar, cold water or sugar is counted in as liquid.

Now-a-days you can also buy packaged aspic which needs only boiling water to dissolve it and it is ready for its filling of meat and vegetables.

Let the gelatin mixture cool until it begins to thicken very slightly, then press the meat and vegetables down firmly into the liquid. Rinsing the mold with cold water before putting in the meat makes it easy to remove the loaf. Or you may line the pan with heavy oiled paper, leaving the ends long enough to act as handles in removing the loaf.

Your family and guests will find this jellied meat combination acceptable for luncheon or dinner when the weather is warm.

Jellied Ham Loaf.

2 cups finely cut cold ham (may be leftover)
1½ tablespoons plain gelatin
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup boiling water
¼ cup vinegar
2 hard cooked eggs
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped celery
1 pimiento
½ green pepper
1 tablespoon onion (if desired)

Soak gelatin in cold water for 10 minutes. Add boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add vinegar and salt and cool until it thickens slightly. Add ham, celery, pepper and pimiento. Rinse loaf pan in cold water, arrange slices of egg and strips of green pepper on the bottom and sides of the pan and pour in the ham mixture. Press down firmly. Chill. Unmold onto platter and garnish with parsley.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Madeleine Carroll.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse, or manufacture any cosmetics.

IF THERE is anything that makes a woman look worse than dry hair, I don't know what it is. Hair can look like hay, especially if it is coarse, and fine hair if it is dry sticks up as if it were charged with electricity. So many queries come in on the subject of what to do about dry hair, I have scouted around and tried to find something especially effective.

Of course, the common sense answer is oil of one kind or another. One manufacturer has brought out an oil which you rub into the scalp after having steamed the head with heavy bath towels which have been dipped in hot water and wrung out so that they are steaming. This steaming opens the pores, after which the oil is quickly effective. If you can do this at night and leave the oil on until morning, it will do its best work for you. Spread a heavy bath towel over your pillow before you lie down so the excess oil will not rub off on the pillow itself.

I haven't found an oil that was any better than this and it is not expensive. You do not have to use as much of it as you would if the oil were thinner. I tried this and my hair was very soft and fluffy.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, NAtional 4200, Branch 323. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER THIRTEEN.

MEANWHILE, he must prepare for the bathe he had promised his guest, although he would have far rather thrown himself back in an armchair, and read the London newspaper which had just arrived.

Though he was very quick over changing into the blue shorts and loose blue jacket which, like everything connected with him, looked exactly suitable to the occasion, Ruth was already waiting for him when he came down again into the hall.

One of her best points was her slight, supple, rounded figure, and she looked bewitching in the blue and white bathing suit she had bought in Paris, and had not yet had occasion to wear. With it she wore a red helmet-like cap embroidered with white wings, which made her look like a gay young Mercury. A long cape which matched her cap completed the ensemble.

"I suppose there's a way down to the beach at the end of the terrace?" she asked gayly.

"There's a better way than that. Have you never noticed that trap-door over by the window?"

Even as he spoke he was pulling at a copper ring set in the floor, and Ruth, running forward, saw the square of oak boarding lift up, revealing a flight of ladder steps.

A moment later they were standing in a vaulted cellar-like place with a wide opening on to the beach. And, as they walked out on to the shingle and sand, Ruth saw that the tide had turned, and was fast running out.

To the right, moored to a tiny jetty, was a motor boat, and in that boat was now working an old sailor. His name was Troy, and he was really the servant of Lady Cicester.

"Are we going out in that jolly little boat?" asked Ruth.

A Rowboat Ride.

Philip Trefane frowned as he answered, "I wish we were, but that boat is regarded as a precious possession by Lady Cicester, though I don't suppose she's ever seen it since the day it was bought. You and I have to go out in that old tub which is absurdly called the Queen of Cornwall," and he pointed with disgust to a small rowboat.

Then he called out: "You might give me a hand, Troy, to run the Cornwall Queen into the water, and after that you can go home. I'll beach her myself."

"Begging your pardon, sir, I've got to fill the motor boat up with petrol. Her ladyship has given leave to Parson's sons to take her out tomorrow morning."

"Well, that job won't take you long, so you can leave it for a few minutes." Then he turned to Ruth: "You can get in now, before we run her into the water."

There were a heap of comfortable colored cushons at one end of the boat, and Ruth sat down on them. A moment later the rowboat was in the water, and Philip Trefane was rowing with easy, powerful strokes, helped by the tide, which was running hard seaward.

After they were well under way, he exclaimed indignantly: "Parson's sons indeed? A crew of rough silly boys! But my aunt's like that—she loves to patronize those she thinks her underlings, and the unfortunate Parson is her slave."

Ruth made no answer to that remark. In some ways she preferred being in this kind of craft rather than in a motor boat. As they sped over the rippling water the grand gray mass of Perranuth castle looked splendid against the sky.

But even now the evening sun was strong, and cast a glare upon the glassy surface of the Cornish sea.

She shut her eyes for a few minutes, and when she opened them again, she felt startled to see how far they had come out, and how small the castle appeared from the wide expanse of water they had reached.

Her pleasant, restful reverie was suddenly broken by hearing the remark, "Now then? If you approve, I think this wouldn't be a bad place for us to jump overboard and start swimming."

Philip's Mood Changes.

He stood up with a quick movement, and the boat rocked a trifle dangerously. She slipped off her cloak; Philip held out his strong, sinewy right hand; and then he stepped up onto the extreme edge of rim of the Queen of Cornwall.

"Be quick, Miss Starling! It'll take us a bit of time getting to the shore after our swim."

His tone was not as pleasant or courteous as usual, and she looked at him with some surprise.

"Step up here!" he ordered.

She looked at him doubtfully, for already there was a strong list to that side. However, she obeyed him. And then she gave a startled cry of surprise, for it was as if the boat had slipped from under her, and she felt herself plunged into the cold—it seemed for the moment icy cold—water.

It took her a minute or two to get her bearings. When she did so, she saw with some dismay that the boat was drifting rapidly away seaward, with its gay cushions, and her charming red cloak, on board.

She struck out boldly and bravely, and soon felt quite warm, but every time she turned toward the shore she found she could make no real headway, owing to the strong current; and soon there came over her a sensation, not exactly of fear, but of doubt and slight anxiety, for whenever she raised her head, the land looked farther, rather than nearer, than before.

"We've had a bit of bad luck, haven't we? But don't worry, we'll make the shore all right."

"Of course we shall," she called back, and began trying to overtake him. But try as hard as she could, she failed to get nearer to him. It was plain that he was making headway, and that she was not.

Feeling suddenly tired, she turned round in the buoyant water, and floated for a while, wondering why her companion did not come back, so as to keep by her. But instead of doing that, every stroke took him farther away.

At last she started swimming again, and began gaining, for the first time. "Would you mind just waiting for me a minute or two?" she called out.

And then all at once, it was as if her heart was thumping against her side—and she remembered with dismay how she had been warned, most seriously, by a noted New York physician, never to overexert herself in a physical sense. Also she recalled, this time with a sensation of sick terror, the fortune teller's warning as to the danger she would be in from water.

Again she turned and floated, and immediately her cessation of effort made her feel easier.

If only Capt. Trefane would turn round and come toward her! She knew that if she rested her hand quite lightly on Philip's shoulder he could easily take her in, and that without her swimming a stroke. She herself had once brought in a frightened child on her back, but that had been in still water, and she had known at the time that it had not done her heart any good.

Saving her breath for a moment, she gave a shout. "Philip! Capt. Trefane! Do come to me——"

She waited a moment. "It's my heart! I simply can't go on swimming."

With infinite relief she saw him turn round, and a moment later she saw his head and shoulders rising from the surface of the water. He was evidently looking for her and she felt an immeasurable sensation of relief. Then, as all at once their eyes met, there came an extraordinary, to her it was a terrifying expression on his face. It seemed a horrible kind of grimacing, jeering grin. What did it mean? What did it portend? And then she knew, for there came a sudden loud wailing cry, "I can't move. I've got a cramp—I'm done!"

What strange and curious prevision of trouble, such as she had experienced several times in her life, owing, it may be, to her strain of Highland blood, caused Iris Trefane, now standing in the huge, gaunt kitchen of the castle, to drop the ladle she held in her hand and run with flying steps along the stone passages which led at last into the great hall?

She rushed across the floor to the oak stool on which there always lay her husband's Zeiss glasses and took them out of their case with shaking hands. Then she raised them to her eyes, adjusting them to her sight. Incredible though it would have appeared to her a few moments ago, she could see that Philip was in difficulties in what appeared to be absolutely placid sea. But she knew there were dangerous currents out there—and that some years back a man staying at the castle had been sucked down and drowned.

Chance to 'Learn How to Think' Given the Girl Who Studies Abroad, Away from the U. S. Whirl

Two American Women Who Head School in Italy Give Views.

A REFRESHING REST from the whirl of American social life, a change in standards and "a chance to learn how to think" are among the advantages offered to the girl who studies in a foreign country. That, at least, is the opinion of two American women, Miss Alberta Ellison and Mrs. L. H. Stevenson, who for ten years have headed the Cas'Alta School for Girls in Florence, Italy.

In Washington with Mrs. Stevenson to spend a few days before going on to Chicago, Miss Ellison yesterday at the Dodge Hotel elaborated on the benefits American girls derive from learning foreign languages, art appreciation and modern history in a country where French and Italian are spoken, where classic art can be studied from original paintings and sculptures, and where foreign affairs can be considered at close range.

Girls Too Busy Here.

"In this country, the average girl has too many demands on her time and energy during the years she is going to school," said Miss Ellison. "In the few fleeting moments from a constant round of parties, club meetings, athletics and shopping, she studies. But by that time her nerves are on edge, and her mind is crowded with thoughts that have little to do with scholarly development. She has no time to read; no time to think during her school year or during vacation."

Even if she foregoes all outside activity for her studies the average girl does have opportunities open to her in a foreign school, according to Miss Ellison. "She may gain a reading knowledge of French; she may learn the grammar, but she doesn't have a chance to speak French, to make it a usable language. Her appreciation of art comes—if it comes at all—largely from books, and her knowledge of foreign affairs from a similar source.

"Attending school in a foreign country, however, she masters French and other languages by speaking them every day with her teachers and other associates. She learns to appreciate Raphael, Michaelangelo, Cellini and the other masters by studying, first hand, their masterpieces.

The economic and political side of history in the making is likewise glimpsed from a new point of view, and the girl who spends at least one year studying current events in Europe gains a sympathetic knowledge of problems facing other countries as well as her own."

Miss Ellison pointed out that girls in the Cas'Alta School learn modern history by methods not offered in any other institution of learning. "We take them to England and France, as well as all over Italy, making a special study of international affairs as they affect each of these countries, as well as the United States. Our pupils spend six months in Italy at the school. The other three months are devoted to study with travel."

Students Learn Language, History and Art as They Travel.

The curriculum provides for each girl having "plenty of time to read and think," Miss Ellison continued. "In this country the average pupil in a finishing school has little time for either."

The Cas'Alta School, she added, not only "finishes" its students, but also prepares them for further work in American and English colleges.

Catholic Unit Hears Jesuit Laud Youth

Says He Is Glad They No Longer Accept Things Without Reason.

Mrs. Peeples Also Talks at Convention of Women's Council.

Modern youth must be given a reason for things, said the Rev. Francis Le Buffe, S. J., of New York, last night at the Second Annual Institute of the National Council of Catholic Women.

"I am thankful," said the priest, "that the day when young people took things because you told them so are over."

Father Le Buffe, Eastern representative of the Sodality Union, was a principal speaker at the night session of the institute in the National Catholic School for social service.

Have Better Knowledge.

"The boy and girl of today," Father Le Buffe said, "fight every inch of the way until they are convinced of your argument and therefore have a better knowledge of religion."

The priest told the women that in the handling of young people they should "listen and never bat an eyelash" when a boy or girl wishes to unload spiritual or other difficulties.

"The best idea," he said, "is to stand on the sidelines and let youth run its own show and work out its own answers.

The importance of publicity in getting across a program was outlined by Miss Katherine R. Williams, of Milwaukee, president of the N. C. C. W.

Mrs. Peeples Talks.

The increasing use of the stage in dramatizing the problems of youth was emphasized at the opening of the sessio nin the morning by Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of Washington's community centers.

Community drama in relation to youth and methods of developing Catholic dramatic clubs were discussed by Mrs. Marie Moore, director of the community drama in Washington; Dennis Connell, of the Roadside Theater, and Miss Nancy Ordway and Miss Mary O'Connell, both of Georgetown Visitation Convent.

The conference will continue until Friday. Approximately 75 delegates are expected to arrive before the meetings close.

Father Le Buffe spoke in the place of Mgr. Michael J. Ready, assistant general secretary, N. C. W. C., who was unable to attend.

Pensioners Living Below Standards

Substandard living conditions of families receiving mothers' pensions for care of children under 16 are described in a statistical study, released yesterday, by Hazel I. Spicer, Board of Public Welfare statistician.

Sixty per cent of these families are living in overcrowded dwellings, she said, and the same proportion have inadequate bathing facilities, or none at all. Average size of the 235 families on mothers' pensions is 4.78 persons but when roomers were accepted to contribute to the average monthly rental of $25.81 the average size was 5.32 persons.

Ninety-four of the families involved are white and 141 are colored.

Lieut. Col. Valliant Transferred to D. C.

The transfer of Maj. Haskell Allison from the Signal Corps School at Fort Monmouth, N. J., to the office of the chief signal officer in this city, also was announced.

Court Enjoins Capital Driver Of 'Lemon' Car

Proctor Grants Application of Dealers Who Claim Injury to Business.

Justice James M. Proctor, in District Supreme Court, yesterday issued a temporary injunction to prevent Vernon L. Haynes, Navy Department employe, from driving about Washington in his Chevrolet automobile painted with brilliant yellow lemons and white elephants.

The action came after 12 Chevrolet dealers of the District and vicinity sought an injunction saying the presence of the car was damaging to their business.

H. L. Ryan, counsel for Haynes, told the court that the dealers' recourse lay in libel rather than in injunction proceedings.

Says Court Powerless.

For the purpose of his argument, Ryan admitted that the decorations on the car constituted libel, but he maintained that the court was powerless to enjoin publication of a libel.

He contended throughout the hearing that the dealers had a right to file libel suits against his client, seeking damages, and that they should proceed by this method rather than seeking action in an equity court.

Representing the Chevrolet dealers, Attorney Joseph T. Sherrier said his clints were being injured by the presence of the car in the streets, and that his only method of halting the injury was an injunction.

Reads Circulars.

He then read to the court a circular Haynes allegedly had published and distributed in front of several sales rooms of Chevrolet dealers. In it the young man said he intended to keep his car on the streets until "it falls apart." He added he even would put a new engine in it to continue his war against the dealers.

Haynes has driven the car about Washington for the past several months, attracting wide attention. He has parked it in front of several agencies.

He insists that he be given back his purchase price or a new automobile because of alleged defects in his present car, which he says was bought last August. He lives at 2121 First street northwest.

Nail by Nail, 18th Century Home Moves Here From New England

'The Lindens,' Only Sanding Example of Its Era Save Mt. Vernon, to Be Ready for Owners in Washington in Three Weeks.

Out at 2400 Kalorama road a house that was started more than 180 years ago is receiving the finishing touches and within the next three weeks the owners, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, will move into their new home, which, while brand-new to Washington, was a landmark in Danvers, Mass., long before the Revolution.

Nail by nail, board by board, and brick by brick the eighteenth century structure, known as "The Lindens," has been brought to Washington, the first time such long-distance and painstaking restoration has been undertaken in the Capital.

Richmond has at least six houses which were moved there from original settings. Other cities have similar dwellings, transferred piece by piece. But the Morrises are the first to attempt such ambitious home building in Washington.

Fiding a suitable fine old place that could be bought was much more difficult than tearing it down and putting it back together again as if it were a jigsaw puzzle.

Wide Search Needed.

The search, under the direction of Walter Mayo Macomber, who was resident architect of the Williamsburg restoration, began about three years ago in Charleston, S. C., extended through Bel Air, Md., to Kittery Point, Me., and finally ended at Danvers where he came upon "The Lindens," at that time an antique shop.

The big square structure, the only example of eighteenth century sanding aside from Mount Vernon, had one particular trait for which Macomber was looking; although it was one of the very oldest houses in the country, it would lend itself to twentieth century conveniences.

The closets, used by the first owners as retreats where they could powder their wigs, were large enough for bathrooms. The narrow baseboards were just wide enough to hold gratings to let in warm air in winter and cool air in summer. The kitchen was large enough to be subdivided into a butler's pantry and service room, while the old fireplace was just the right size to hold an electric range.

Even Wallpaper Saved.

Aside from the kitchen, the old house, thanks to Macomber's efforts, is just about as it was when it was occupied by Robert King Cooper, wealthy fish merchant, in Danvers 182 years ago. Even the wallpaper in the spacious center hall was carefully removed and then pasted on again.

The paper, in rich colorings which run mostly to vivid greens, is one of the noteworthy features of the Lindens. Divided into three historical and legendary scenes, including the adventures of Telamachus, the son of Ulysses, it comprises the three most complete sets of wallpaper in the United States, according to authorities on the subject.

And then there are the floor stencils, earliest in this entire country, according to another authority. One bedroom has a wild rose pattern bordering its floor. The center hall's floor is decorated with the three plumes of the Prince of Wales and a small Oriental design. Upstairs a grapevine runs around the hall.

The sanded ashlar blocks from which the house is made appear so new that many persons have decided the original wood was covered to comply with Washington fire prevention regulations. Nothing annoys Macomber so much as that opinion. He has explained over and over that the ship's blocks were painted with ship's varnish when they were first cut and then sanded. The sand is still on them, just as it is on the blocks about Mount Vernon.

River Victim's Clothing Identified by His Wife

Clothing left aboard the steamship Potomac Saturday night by a man who leaped overboard near Mount Vernon was identified yesterday at the Harbor Police Station by Mrs. Raymond E. Olive, 26, of 809 Sixth street southwest, as belonging to her husband.

Mrs. Olive told police her husband had gone on the "moonlight" cruise and that he had not been seen since. She said the coat, shoes and necktie left on the boat were those he wore when he left home. The body has not been recovered.

Veterans from every post in Washington were in the line of march, and the following groups were awarded silver loving cups for martial splendor and perfect marching:

Davey Wins Float Prize.

For the best float in the 20-minute long parade, a prize was awarded to the Chestnut Farms Dairy, and for the best appearing vehicle Jack Pry Co. was honored.

Presentations were made at Thomson School, headquarters for the encampment.

Long before sunset units began gathering at Fourteenth street and Florida avenue, where the parade began. By dusk they were ready to march. A police escort led the parade.

Along Fourteenth street—for 15 blocks—an estimated 15,000 persons lined the streets to watch the parade.

Notables Are Judges.

At the reviewing stand many notables acted as judges. They were George Offutt, chairman of the A. B. C. Board; Col. H. S. Kimberly and D. C. Campbell, who judged the best floats and the best vehicles.

W. F. Santleman, U. S. Marines; James A. Wynn, U. S. Navy, and Carl Hubner, U. S. Army, who judged bands and drum and bugle corps; Col. Dan I. Sultan, District Engineer Commissioner, who reviewed the parade.

Oscar Hollingsworth, Ben F. Bracher and Nathan Golden, who picked the best V. F. W. and best best V. F. W. Auxiliary marching units.

Col. W. A. McCathran, U. S. Army, and his two aids, Lieut. Chester Hammond and Lieut. Forrest Carraway, who picked the best non-V. F. W. units.

The parade was sponsored by the Central Business Men's Association.

At the meeting at Thomson School, an address of welcome was delivered by Hugh Geiser, Central Business Men's Association president. A reply was made by Department Commander Edward K. Inman. Mrs. Clay Keene Miller, president of the auxiliary, also spoke.

An address by James E. Van Zandt, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will feature tonight's session.

Dean of City Democrats Sought for Honors.

A man who cast a ballot—if he voted the Democratic ticket—in the District of Columbia before Washington lost its vote in 1873, will be wined and dined and showered with honors if the Roosevelt Nominators Club can find hm.

A Democrat—the oldest in the District—is the object of a city-wide search by the Nominators Club. If they find their man he will be given a bottle of wine of 1873 vintage and ride in the automobile at the head of the Roosevelt torchlight procession here Saturday night.

Officer Leads Big Bay Steeds To the Lock-up

For Policeman A. H. Preusser the theme of "Wagon Wheels" is not new, but it had new variations yesterday.

The trouble was that John Askew, 27, of 2422 Thirty-ninth street northwest, was driving along in his shiny automobile, and at Eleventh street and Florida avenue northwest, a dump cart pulled by two strapping bay horses sideswiped his car and dented a fender.

Askew asked the grizzled driver, William Lewis, 52, of Fort Myer Heights, Va., what he was going to do about it. The driver merely looked pained, in the manner of a '49er, and drove on.

After following him for more than an hour, Askew reported the matter to Preusser.

Pruesser used to drive teams out in the Great Northwest. He and Askew found the team and the driver two blocks from the station house of the Seventh Precinct. The driver was singing and swaying, the policeman said.

The policeman slid alongside the driver, who handed him the reins. Behind came a scout car, Askew's dented automobile and several dozens of neighborhood children and their pets.

At the station house Lewis was booked for intoxication, and John Inscoe, of Rosslyn, Va., owner of the wagon, promised to repair the fender.

"That's a fine pair o' horses," mused Pruesser a few minutes later, "but, my gosh, I forgot to learn their names."

Henry Hadley Listed to Lead Sunset Concert

Composer One of Eight to Accept Invitations as Guest Conductors.

The name of Henry Hadley was added yesterday to the list of eminent musicians who have accepted invitations to conduct symphony concerts at the Arlington Memorial Bridge watergate beginning next month.

Announcement of his acceptance was made by the Washington Summer Concerts Association. He is the eighth guest conductor to be enlisted for the eight-week series, scheduled to open either July 12 or July 19.

Equally well known as conductor and composer, Hadley for six years was associate conductor of the New York Philharmonic and conducted four seasons of that orchestra's summer concerts in Lewisohn Stadium. He formerly conducted the San Francisco and Seattle symphonies, organized by Manhattan Symphony of New York several years ago and led the Chicago Symphony at the Century of Progress Exposition.

He has conducted for the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera companies and made numerous guest appearances in America.

$15,000,000 Pepco Bonds AreApproved

Three Other Companies Are Outbid by Dillon, Read & Co.

Permission to float a $15,000,000 bond issue was granted the Potomac Electric Power Co. late yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission after four weeks' consideration of the request.

Approval of the application paves the way for issuance of first mortgage bonds, bearing 3¼ per cent interest and falling due in 1966, whose proceeds of $15,000,000 will retire certain outstanding bonded indebtedness and reimburse the power company's treasury for expenses incidental to extending and bettering the firm's properties.

An aggregate saving of $58,000 a year will result from the lower interest rate of the new issue in comparison with those bonds which will be retired and canceled, the P. U. C. stated.

Dillon, Read Bid Wins.

Dillon, Read & Co. was announced as the successful bidder for the flotation at a price of 103.027 per cent of the $15,000,000 principal, plus accrued interest, if any, from July 1, 1936. Y. E. Booker & Co. acted as local agent for the New York brokerage house.

The P. U. C. held that the issue "is necessary and reasonably required by the company" to pay the $3,922,000 principal of 5 per cent consolidated mortgage gold bonds maturing July 1; to redeem on or before October 1 the $3,264,900 bonds drawing 6 per cent which fall due April 1, 1935; reimburse the company for its purchase of $3,078,000 in bonds and retire same; retire and cancel the $1,760,000 principal of an issue now in the treasury and reimburse the company to the amount of $735,100, and to make another reimbursement of $2,240,000 for property improvements.

To Be Issued in Series.

It is provided that the new bonds shall be issued in series from time to time upon such terms as may be fixed by the company's board of directors.

To obtain the bid for the issue, Dillon, Read & Co. competed with Blyth & Co., Inc., Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., and Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Commenting on the authorization, People's Counsel William A. Roberts hinted his disfavor with an assertion that no public hearing was held on the proposed transaction despite the fact he had recommended such action.

Ostepaths to Meet.

The Bartender Held Interest Of Ardent Fan

By the United Press.

The No. 2 Miss Pickford, who retired from the screen several years ago, was on one of her rare visits to the Pickford-Lasky studio and her question startled those on the "Gay Desperado" set because she passed up principals Nino Martini, Leo Carrillo and Ida Lupino to stare at a gray-haired, mustachioed man serving drinks in a prop Mexican cantino.

"His name is John Lock," Director Rouben Mamoulian replied to her query. "Never heard of him until he asked for a screen test, but he has turned out to be a mighty clever actor."

"I'm very happy to hear you say that," replied Miss Pickford. "It means a great deal because John Lock is my husband, and this is his first picture."

Lock, former Pittsburgh and Chicago sportsman, retired from the brokerage business to write fiction six years ago. He married Miss Pickford in 1933, and they lived quietly in Hollywood until Lock developed a yen to be an actor.

Although it seems incredible, nobody on the lot connected him with Lottie Pickford until she came to watch him work. Mary Pickford, busy with business affairs, hadn't visited the set since the day the picture began, and that was before Lock was hired.

"I don't know whether I'll continue acting or not," he said. "Wait until the preview. We'll have to see how I look on the screen."

Mr. Cooper's Future.

Cooper's contract with Paramount, which won't expire until December or January, forbids any prior dickers, Moss says. Gangling Gary's only other commitment is for two pictures under Emmanuel Cohen, formerly of Columbia, who recently joined semi-independent producers in the Paramount fold.

Stylist Walter Plunkett, who hates Hollywood but can't stay away, says "Gibson Girl" fashions, popular around the turn of the century, are the hot tip for late fall and winter. Plunkett is back from New York to turn out 277 costumes for Katharine (The Great) Hepburn's "Portrait of a Rebel."

Japanese-American amenities by Joan Crawford and Sachito Chiba, the "Greta Garbo of Japan," cost Designer Adrian a night's sleep.

Chiba appeared at M.-G.-M. to see Franchot Tone, but also found time to interview his missus. When Crawford exclaimed over Chiba's Japanese costume, the "Greta Garbo" upped and presented her with it, for later delivery, of course, and added her parasol to boot.

Not to be outdone, Crawford presented Chiba with a large beaded satin bag which is part of her costume as early American dame in "Gorgeous Hussy." It was swell stuff for international diplomacy, but the show must go on, so Adrian burned midnight oil duplicating the bag.

Will Hays Gives In.

Paramounties report complete victory over the hosts of Will H. Hays in battle over "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie." First Haysites refused to sanction filming of Barry Benefield's yarn of a "Lady of the Evening With a Heart of Gold," but judicious editorial slicing overcame objections. Next Haysers balked at the title, and "With Banners Blowing" was substituted, but that objection, too, has been withdrawn and the picture will go under original billing.

Marx brothers will try their "Day At the Race Track" on the dog from legitimate stages in Minneapolis, Detroit, Chicago, and one other city yet to be selected. They used the same technique in building their last screen effusion, "Night At the Opera."

John Boles refused to agree to do "Cuban Cavalier," his next musical, until studio gave him written permission to attend "John Boles Day" July 4 at the Texas Centennial.

Coast Export Trade Continues to Gain

San Francisco, June 22.—Pacific Coast export trade during the first four months of this year continued the upward trend of 1935, according to the Bank of America Business Review.

In the first four months of this year exports through the five Pacific Coast Customs Districts totaled $87,618,000, a gain of $1,374,000 over the like four months of 1935, the bank reports. Exports through the Pacific Coast Customs Districts aggregated $278,418,000 during 1935, a gain of $20,240,000, or 7.8 per cent, over 1934.

So the Guy Tells Her Who He Is!

"I'm Blackie Norton," Clark Gable informs Jeannette MacDonald in this scene from "San Francisco," a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production in which Spencer Tracy, hero of "Fury," also has a stellar role, all under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke, the megaphoner who makes very few mistakes. "San Francisco" will be given a special public preview at Loew's Fox on Thursday night, July 2, prior to its regular engagement on the screen at the Palace, following "Private Number," co-starring Robert Taylor and Loretta Young.

About The Showshops

FAR be it from me to be the one to suggest that nothing compares favorably with something, but, even so, the National Capital, in proportion to population and number of potential theatergoers, is not running so far behind New York in the matter of summertime entertainment in the living theater.

BELL.

To be sure, with our resident population of close to half a million, we have no downtown outlet for the so-called legitimate drama in operation at the present time, but out of Broadway's multiplicity of theaters dedicated to the drama of flesh and blood only 15 continue to present their wares, as this is written, as a sop to the amusement demands of New York's 7,000,000. That isn't too many if all of the 7,000,000 should make up their minds to go to the theater the same night!

Among the 15 plays still running in New York, Washington has seen five—Philip Merivale and Gladys Cooper in "Call It a Day," Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in Robert Emmett Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight," Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina," "Three Men on a Horse" and "Tobacco Road," although the last named is being played in New York by James Barton in the role of Jeeter Lester, instead of Henry Hull, who created the part and was seen in it here.

Despite the fact that Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight" was given the Pulitzer Prize award as the best play of the 1935-36 season, there are still many—including this column—who think that the New York Drama Critics' Circle exercised the better judgment in bestowing that honor upon Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset."

Van Wyck Potter, the enthusiastically reviled writer of the "Revue of Reviews" in that bulky symposium of masculine this-and-that known as Esquire—who after having had all of the first flight of metropolitan drama critics reaching for the smelling salts or a bung-starter, turns out to be a woman—refers to "Idiot's Delight" as "Robert E. Sherwood's box-office hash of childish observations on the stupidity of war, interlarded with cheap vaudeville acts," to which "I offer large and resounding raspberries." Van Wyck Potter, incidentally, being a woman working on a so-called "magazine for men" has been tossed out on her ear and no longer is a member of the Esquire staff, although the ire of the editorial management, it seems to me, should have been mitigated a little by the fact that this "man's magazine" is the first thing the women snatch off the library table for their own fascinated perusal.

But that is aside from the point that my fellow-Hoosier from Fort Wayne, Master George Jean Nathan, is almost as vitriolic as the Potter person in his condemnation of Mr. Sherwood's play, and in almost the same terms with regard to its vaudeville aspects.

We still think it is not quite that bad, although infinitely the inferior of "Winterset." Which is probably the last you will hear of the matter in this space.

• • • •

While no District theater continues to purvey living drama at the moment, there is, of course, the Roadside Theater, with its fortnightly changes of bill, to engage the attention of those who do not mind a comparatively short trek out the Rockville pike to enjoy an evening of extravagant overplaying in the erstwhile haymow of a capacious old barn. The Roadsiders, with the collapse of Mr. Stephen E. Cochran's elaborate plans for an amusement plant of expansive proportions out the Georgia avenue pike at Darby Farm, now has the summer field completely to itself and undoubtedly will make the most of it. Their season is well planned and is showing the benefits of two previous summers of successful operation. It is too bad that Mr. Cochran's pretentious plans were sidetracked—at least until next season—by that untimely recurrence of his old bubonic plague. This enforced failure to strike while the iron was hot, to coin a nifty, carries the threat of three or four other interests, beating the old Panjandrum to the punch next spring—a contingency he was particularly anxious to avoid.

Dots and Dashes.

An extra added attraction will be made available to patrons of Loew's Fox Theater tonight at 8:40 o'clock, when the Savannah, Ga., Male Chorus of 40 voices will be presented for one appearance only. . . . The singers are led by E. Gordon Hanson, with Mrs. Addie Mae Jackson as accompanist . . . Both of Savannah . . . The chorus is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Georgia, here to attend the International Kiwanis convention, now in session . . . The Fox management also announces a special public preview of "San Francisco," co-starring Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, with Spencer Tracy likewise in the running, on Thursday night, July 2, preliminary to its regular later engagement on the screen at the Palace, where it will follow "Private Number," with Loretta Young and Robert Taylor . . . Tickets are priced at a flat 99 cents and now are on sale at the box offices of Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia theaters . . . Edgar Kennedy, screen comedian headlining the vaudeville bill at the Earle, isn't having so much trouble working up his "slow burn" during the local engagement . . . It comes naturally . . . Ed, a former Pacific Coast heavyweight champion, was all primed to sit down front and watch the Schmeling-Louis leather-pushing last Thursday night, when it was rained out and he had to take a train for his Earle engagement . . . Been on fire ever since . . . Which may be why his act is going a lot better now . . . Or was Sunday night, when I caught it . . . The whole stage show was a honey, as a matter of fact . . . So much so that some of the white silk, left legs of those Bebe Berri Dancers thought they were in for a run . . . They were . . . Both ways from the knee!

Roadsiders

"TOUR DU MONDE." The Roadside Theater presents an episodic adventure tale in three acts and 14 scenes by Thomas Wood Stevens, based on "Tour of the World in 80 Days" by Jules Verne, directed by Harrold A. Weinberger, with settings by Edith I. Allen and costumes by Dorothy Croissant. Choreography by Elizabeth Giles. Incidental music by Betty Grey. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Filled with comedy and drama, the whole moving along with celerity, "Around the World in 80 Days" continues at the Roadside Theater—the old red barn out on the Rockville pike—one of the finest efforts of the unique summertime acting group.

Of the work of George Farrington, as the touring Phineas Gogg; Kehn Romney, as his Gallic valet; J. Edmund Veitch, as the accompanying American; Virginia True, as the Princess Aouda; Ralph Fowler, as the would-be Nemesis—of these, and of the others in the excellent company, extended comment was made last week, and there is no reason for now altering that appraisal.

The exigencies of nonelastic deadlines last week forced the inadvertent omission of any mention of Director Harrold A. Weinberger. Here Mr. Weinberger has done an amazingly fine job, manipulating upon the Roadsiders' 2 by 4" stage a veritable host of performers as to permit a reasonable freedom of movement and lend authenticity to the action. In the less populous scenes, he has been no less keen in drawing from his cast the most in line and action.

The dances by Elizabeth Giles, the incidental music by Betty Grey (as well as her entr' acte selections), the rendition of "Casey Jones" by Margaret Osterwald, Milton Freedman's impassioned Amerindian speech, the settings by Edith I. Alleen (and not the least is the map-of-the-world curtains), and the costumes by Dorothy Croissant, all add their bits to the sum total of enjoyment of the dramatized Jules Verne story.

Waller Recital

The Ellen Waller School of Dance presents its first and second year students in a recital of dances routined and staged by Ellen Waller. Music by a Leon Brusiloff orchestra, with Genevieve Petcavage at the piano. At the Belasco Theater. Reviewed Monday evening by W. A. Whitney.

In two acts, comprising 38 routines of toe and tap dances, the first and second-year students of the Ellen Waller School of Dance presented their year's-end recital last evening in the Belasco Theater.

Because of last minute shifts in the program order, making it impossible for those not "in the know" definitely to identify the dancers, individual credits must be omitted. However, Evelyn Clements bore the brunt of the show, appearing, exclusive of ensembles, in ten numbers, which were executed with as near terpsichorean abandon as was displayed at any time upon the stage.

Two Others Are Versatile.

Geraldine Griffis and Anne O'Conner, respectively, in eight and six numbers, were the runners-up for versatility of performance.

As with other recitals of the season, last evening's ran the gamut of dance forms, with tap and toe routines perdominating supplemented by a series of "national" steps.

From a technical point of view, especially notable was Miss Waller's particular attention to the endings of the numbers, the dancers, unlike in many another recital, terminating their steps with the music.

Radio Hearing Urged to Alter Wave Divisions

Bands Above and Below Present Limits Sought for Commercial Use.

A spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters yesterday advocated far-reaching changes in the present assignment of radio channels as a fact-finding hearing into television and radio started its second week.

Prof. Charles B. Aiken, of the faculty of Purdue University, recommended that commercial sound broadcasting be allowed to use channels both above and below the present limits. He also asked that wide bands in the high frequencies, not permanently assigned, be reserved.

Much of the radio equipment on ships is "trash," and the Government should take steps to make it modern, thus conserving air lanes for other uses, Aiken said.

Large areas in the United States, especially in the rural sections, are without daytime service, Aiken asserted, in suggesting the Communications Commission allow stations two or three times as powerful as at present to reach them.

T. M. Craven, commission engineer, suggested, however, that such a step might involve a monopolistic danger.

Vacation Dangers Cited by Ruhland

Without intending to "take all the joy out of life," Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday reminded prospective vacationers danger lurks outdoors and advised them to guard against contact with germs that cause typhoid, rabbit and undulant fevers and the tick responsible for spotted fever.

Typhoid, he reminded, is contracted through contaminated food and drink while undulant fever may result from the use of unpasteurized milk. Hunters were warned against the wood tick, whose bite often produces Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

Rabbit fever, or tularemia, is most common in the fall during the hunting season. Handling of infected rabbits, or other small rodents which may have caught the disease, is extremely dangerous.

Vacationers, said Dr. Ruhland, who would avoid illness should insist upon pure water and milk and patronize sanitary eating places. And, as an added precaution, he recommended typhoid vaccination, especially to persons planning travel into rural areas.

Gans Receives Pen Used by Roosevelt

Isaac Gans, venerable member of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, yesterday was in possession of the pen used by President Roosevelt to approve the joint resolution of Congress which keeps him in office.

Seventy-five years old and therefore beyond the Government age limit, Gans' incumbency was imperiled until Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee introduced the resolution legalizing his reappointment.

The confirmation pen was forwarded to Gans by Marvin H. McIntyre, of the White House secretariat.

Mrs. Lawson Urged As Parley Delegate

Appointment of Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation, as a United States representative to the Buenos Aires Peace Conference was urged by the District Federation at its June meeting.

The General Federation is working to include Susan B. Anthony among figures being carved on Mount Rushmore, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley reported. She said the District Federation was expected to indorse the project.

The following reported on the recent meeting of the General Federation's council at Miami: Mrs. W. W. Husband, chairman of the headquarters and house committee of the General Federation, and Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, radio chairman.

Sylvan Theater Rules Are Stressed by Center

The Community Center Department yesterday asked that these rules be observed by those attending the presentation of "Smilin' Thru," at the Sylvan Theater tonight:

Grant Victor In Debut at Wimbledon

Wimbledon, England, June 22 (AP).—Bryan M. Grant, mighty tennis atom from Atlanta, shelled Heiner Henkel, German Davis cup star, from the all-England championships today as favorites otherwise progressed to the second round in more or less routine fashion.

Spotting the German the first two sets, Grant uncorked a savage rally that shunted Henkel to the sidelines, won the Atlantan an ovation from the crowd and carried him into the second round along with five others of the American delegation that numbered 11 when the championships began.

Among the American casualties was W. L. (Bill) Breese, of Washington, D. C., No. 2 ranking player of the District of Columbia, who bowed to H. G. N. Lee, British Davis Cup player, 6—1, 6—1, 6—1. The left-handed former Harvard star was completely outclassed.

Once he had got himself organized, Grant, who was making his Wimbledon debut, was unstoppable. Covering court with the agility that has made him a redoubtable antagonist for any foe, the tiny Atlantan fired a barrage of perfectly executed ground strokes that Henkel simply could not handle and the German bowed out of the tournament, beaten 5—7, 3—6, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

Of the other American victors, Donald Budge, red-thatched star from Oakland, Calif., played impressively to eliminate H. A. Hare of Great Britain, 6—1, 6—1, 6—4, but Wilmer Allison, American champion from Austin, Tex., favored his lame hip and applied no more pressure than was necessary in putting out the former English junior champion, Robert Mulliken, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3.

Joining these three in the second round were John Van Ryn of Philadelphia, Gene Mako of Los Angeles, and David N. Jones, former Columbia captain. Van Ryn disposed of Roland Morton, Great Britain, 6—3, 6—6, 6—2 and Mako defeated another Briton, Laurie Shaw, 6—3, 6—0, 6—4. Jones, drawing one of the day's largest galleries on the strength of his howitzer service which British experts call faster than Big Bill Tilden's in his prime, won from E. J. David of Great Britain, 6—3, 6—1, 5—7, 6—2.

Berg and Chandler Tie for Golf Medal

Denver, June 22 (AP).—Two of the most dangerous contenders for Marion Miley's women's transmississippi golf title—Patty Berg, Minneapolis redhead, and Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas—tied for the medal as the event opened at the Denver Country Club today.

The freckled Patty, who said she was "pretty lucky," reported first, with 36-38—74. An hour later Mrs. Chandler, a cool veteran who formerly held the Texas title, holed out for 37-37. She described her round as "a struggle all the way."

Miss Miley, Lexington, Ky., entry, was not required to play in the qualifying round.

Papa Wins a Big Cup for Baby

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, Mo., June 22.

Young James Brooklyn DeShong may have his ears pinned back by the lowly St. Louis Browns tomorrow, and he may never win another ball game for Manager Bucky Harris, but at the current writing he represents the American League's greatest baseball bargain of 1936.

With his record of eight victories and three defeats, the pompadoured right-hander is only one triumph removed from a tie for the pitching lead. Only Monte Pearson, of the Yankees, and Lefty Grove, of the Red Sox, have a more impressive record than DeShong, who came to the Nats as ballast in the four-player deal with the Yankees last winter.

POVICH.

At a time when Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, finds himself sorely harassed by the lack of competent pitchers, DeShong is blossoming as something of a sensation with Washington. Twice he has turned in two-hit games, once his effort was a four-hitter, and another time he emerged with a five-hit performance.

If McCarthy isn't rueing the trade that sent DeShong to the Nats along with Outfielder Jesse Hill in exchange for Pitcher Bump Hadley and Outfielder Roy Johnson, then the man's philosophy deserves a niche in the Smithsonian Institution.

Summed up, the Yankees' share of the trade was a pitcher whom McCarthy now is willing to send into a game only as a last resort, and an outfielder who has been unable to break into the regular New York line-up in more than a month.

Jesse Hill has been no particular help to the Nats who demand more robust hitting, but DeShong's performances have labeled the deal as the smartest piece of trading Clark Griffith has achieved in recent years. At current market figures, DeShong is a $100,000 chattel, obtained for a pair of players whose combined value is not very much at all.

The Messrs. Griffith and Harris have apparently batted 1.000 in the four deals they have swung this season. Their first move toward strengthening their club, the trade that sent Heinie Manush to Boston in exchange for Outfielders Carl Reynolds and Johnson has redounded to their credit ever since. It provided the Nats with some bait offered the Yankees in the swinging of the DeShong deal, and it left 'em with an excellent utility outfielder in Reynolds.

Up in Boston, Manager Joe Cronin has confided to his intimates that he was sadly taken in by the Manush trade. But it was his own fault. He envisioned Manush and remembered him best as the .390-hitting outfielder of 1933, only to discover that Manush, now three years older, has slowed up sadly in the field and doesn't hit so well now, either.

The DeShong deal with the Yankees represented the Nats' last trading effort for some months until they barely beat the June 15 deadline with another pair of trades. The first of these, the Joe Cascarella-Jack Russell affair, has already begun to pay dividends.

Once a great relief pitcher, Russell became an extreme liability with the Nats during the past two years and great was Griffith's surprise when Eddie Collins, of the Red Sox, offered him Joe Cascarella and a few thousand in cash for Russell. The Nats leaped at the offer on the well-taken theory that anything obtained for Russell was sheer profit.

The deal had hardly been made when Cascarella, given a relief role, turned in a sweet effort against the Tigers. Eager to learn if that was a flash in the pan, Harris started him a few days later against Cleveland and was rewarded with one of the best-pitched games of the year, despite the fact that the dapper little Italian was beaten, 2 to 1, by Mel Harder.

That last deal that Griffith and Harris swung also bears all the earmarks of a smart piece of business. Content to give up Jake Powell and his base-running talents to the Yankees in exchange for Ben Chapman, Harris after one week's association with Chapman, finds reason to congratulate himself with great fervor.

Powell is doing tolerably well with the Yankees, playing the same enthusiastic game he always played with the Nats, getting his base hits, making clever catches in the outfield, and striking terror into all infielders with his helter-skelter base-running.

But Chapman's presence in centerfield has been a continual source of delight to Harris, who has seen him hold runners on base with an iron arm when those same players would be taking an extra sack on the scatter-armed Powell. Chapman has not yet delivered the long hits Harris anticipates from him, but his singles have more authority than Powell's and by the speed he imparts to 'em find holes in the infield that Powell's wallops had no right to expect.

And, now, if the Nats would only win some ball games, those trades would look even better.

Forty-seven Yachts Get Flying Start in Annual Bermuda Race

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., June 22.—Forty-seven yachts competing in the Cruising Club of America's biennial race to Bermuda put to sea under auspicious circumstances today.

Small power craft skidded about the harbor. Tall-rigged sailing vessels not competing stood by, their loose canvas spanking spars and masts. Whistles screamed a final "bon voyage."

A third contestant was the yawl, Stormy Weather, whose owner Phillip Le Bouletier, of New York, captured last summer's ocean race to Norway.

Two distant cousins of the President, himself a yachting enthusiast, were among the competitors in the 635-mile cruise.

George E. Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., skippered the 60-foot schooner, Mistress, and his brother, John K., entered with his sloop, Esmeralda.

Pearson Is Pounded; Appling Batting Star, Triples.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 22.—The New York Yankees strengthened their position at the top of the American League standings today as they put over six runs in the seventh inning to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 9 to 6. The victory, coupled with the Red Sox's defeat, increased the Yanks' margin over Boston to five and one-half games.

Pearson himself was driven from the box in the last of the same inning, but Bump Hadley checked the Chicago bats before they could account for more than one run.

Nationals' Tilt With Browns Postponed

By a Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, June 22.—Even a rainy day in St. Louis, equivalent in this circuit to a fortnight in the bastille, was welcomed by the slightly bedraggled Nats today. The recent turn of events in Cleveland, where they were plucked clean of the three-game winning streak they had amassed in Detroit, was very unhappy.

But the Nats have developed a new fondness for St. Louis, regarded generally as the league's jumping-off place, what with its scorching temperatures, its pathetic ball team and its apathetic fans. The Washington firm is beginning to, like the town, and small wonder.

The Nats haven't lost a ball game here this season. In fact, in the seven times they've met up with the Brownsthis year—it was so nice to have met 'em—they collected six ball games. That sort of success naturally engenders a fondness for anything with a St. Louis label.

After that debacle in Cleveland, the Nats could not have picked their next stop with more selfishness of purpose if the choice had been theirs to make. But Manager Bucky Harris is not prepared to trust to luck here. Tomorrow he is shooting Jimmy DeShong, his leading pitcher, at Hornsby's club.

Yale's Golfers Top College Qualifying

By the United Press.

Glenview, Ill., June 22.—With two of its members tied for the individual lead, Yale University took a three-stroke lead over the field today at the end of the first 18-hole qualifying round in the National Intercollegiate golf championship.

Capt. Herb Eshelman and a sophomore teammate, Paul Jamison, posted 75, 3 over par, to tie Fred Haas, jr., of Louisiana State, and Lynford Lardner, Harvard, for the 18-hole lead.

Yale's team total of 306 was 3 strokes better than Princeton.

Both Lardner and Haas blew chances for the lead on the eighteenth hole. Lardner, who went out in 35, dropped his second shot far over the final green and was forced to relay his third off a concrete runway near the clubhouse. He holed out in 40, for 75. Haas missed a 4-footer on the eighteenth.

British Open Halted by Storm

By the Associated Press.

Hoylake, England, June 22.—An electrical storm struck Hoylake and Wallasey today, unleashed one bolt of lightning that stunned three spectators and a caddy, and washed out 40 scores in the qualifying round of the British Open Golf Championship, including a record-smashing 67 by Henry Cotton, the 1934 champion.

Greens on the two qualifying courses were 5 or 6 inches deep in water when the storm was over and the tournament committee decided to cancel all posted scores and order a new start tomorrow.

At the height of the storm, one bolt struck the Wallasey clubhouse, where Gene Sarazen, the leading American contender, was resting, and stunned three spectators who had sought shelter there.

Suffers Burns.

One man suffered burns severe enough to require hospital treatment; a girl, who was telephoning, was stricken temporarily deaf, and a British sports writer was knocked off his chair.

Sarazen, only a few feet from the secretary's office, where the shock appeared to be concentrated, escaped injury. All the electrical fixtures in the clubhouse were put out of commission.

The storm came as an unfortunate blow to Cotton, British pro, at a Brussels club, who played almost perfect golf over the par 71 Wallasey layout. Cotton was in only one bunker, 3-putted only one green and would have had a 66 had not his first putt on the eighteenth green hung on the lip of the cup.

Of the American delegation, Errie Ball, of Mobile, Ala., and Frank Ball, of Tannersville, N. Y., both had completed their rounds.

Errie posted an entirely satisfactory 72 over Wallasey, but Frank, who arrived only Sunday, after

Malicious Rumors Heard Concerning Joe Louis' Defeat

An outburst of the goofiest rumors yet to follow a big athletic upset had U street practically agog yesterday as tall tales concerning the recent defeat of Joe Louis by Max Schmeling were tossed carelessly from mouth to mouth.

The first rumors, purported to have originated on a radio broadcast, had it that Louis had been doped in the third round—and that his trainer, Jack Blackburn, had been charged with administering the drug. The rumor was, of course, false, and no local station broadcast the erroneous report.

Later, Louis' co-managers were implicated in the rumors—and, of course, that was not true. Still later, the name of a prominent local colored physician was linked to the rumors.

The last reports had the local physician arrested—and the sum of $80,000 being found on his person at the time of his arrest. The physician had not seen Louis or any of his entourage for three weeks before the fight and, needless to say, was not implicated in the doping, as there was no doping.

Unappreciated Bout Annexed by Burman

By Bill McCormick.

Clarence (Red) Burman, Jack Dempsey's heavyweight hope, used the ribs of one Frankie (Dutch) Weimer as a xylophone to take a unanimous 10-round decision from the Californian in the feature boxing bout at Griffith Stadium last night.

The bout, which was not so pleasing to watch, but nevertheless a very hard-fought affair, was witnessed by a sparse crowd of about 2,000. There were no knockdowns, although Berman several times seemed to have the Dutchman all set to kiss the canvas. Red himself was in difficulty only once in the tenth round when his chin collided with a stiff straight right.

The eventual winner looked like a winner from the opening bell. He ripped viciously into Weimer's middle throughout the first round, then suddenly shifted to the Weimer chin the second. At that point he seemed destined to win by a knockout and so it looked many times after. But the knockout finish never came.

The boys who contribute at the boxoffice gave the contest rhythmic handclapping and the Harlem Huzzah almost throughout. This reaction probably was attributable to three causes.

Cause No. 2—There was no local interest in either boy.

Cause No. 3—Burman may be the Dempsey discovery everywhere else in the country, but here he is just the middleweight who once campaigned extensively here as K. O. Burns, of Baltimore, and lost a

Championship Bout Goal of Cleveland

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 22.—The Great Lakes Exposition made a $1,250,000 bid today for the fight between James J. Braddock and Max Schmeling for the heavyweight championship.

Lincoln G. Dickey, general manager of the exposition, sent a telegram to promoter Mike Jacobs, at New York, saying: "I am authorized to enter into negotiations with you to stage the James J. Braddock Max Schmeling match for the heavyweight championship of the world here in September in the Cleveland Municipal Stadium."

Said Jacobs in New York: "That's real dough, but first we have to close for the match. There is much to be done before we consider staging it anywhere."

Madison Square Garden holds an option on Braddock's services, but Schmeling has announced he prefers to fight under Jacobs' promotion.

Dickey's telegram said he was authorized to enter the negotiations as "general manager of the Great Lakes Exposition being conducted in Cleveland from June 27 to October 4," and added "we are prepared to underwrite the match for $1,250,000." He offered to discuss the fight with Jacobs in New York or Cleveland.

The Cleveland Stadium has been inclosed in the exposition grounds.

'Huskies' Sweep Entire Card; 50,000 Fans See Contest.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22.—Coming from behind with a killing spurt to whip California's three-time champions in the 4-mile varsity race, the University of Washington's mighty oarsmen completed a dazzling sweep of the intercollegiate championship regatta this evening in a history-making performance.

The huskies from far-off Seattle scored three smashing victories over America's foremost college crews as the Far West absolutely dominated the Hudson River for the second successive year.

The blistering, rip-roaring drive that carried Washington's great varsity boatload to triumph over the Golden Bears and five Eastern rivals followed two decisive preliminary triumphs.

The official time for the varsity race was Washington, 19:09 3-5; California, 19:13 2-5; Navy, 19:16 4-5; Columbia, 19:27 1-5; Cornell, 19:34 3-5; Penn, 19:37 4-5; Syracuse, 19:44 4-5.

Outrow Bears.

The husky freshmen, capturing the 2-mile opener for the third straight year, outrowed California, with four Eastern crews beaten off. The three-mile junior varsity race saw Washington score for the second straight year by coming from behind to subdue Navy and romp off with a sensational four-length decision.

Washington's blazing set of triumphs, achieved under nearly perfect conditions and witnessed by a crowd of upwards of 50,000 spectators, not only ended California's varsity reign, but marked the first sweep any college has scored since 1912, when Cornell captured all three races on the Poughkeepsie program.

That was back in the days when the junior varsity race was a four-oared event so that Washington now has the distinction of being the first to sweep the river in all eight-oared competition, dating from 1914.

The varsity victory that made it

Titian Kiddie, Smith Up, Wins Charles Town Purse, Pays $5.20

D. C. Jockey's Riding Is Superb

Equals Track Record in Effort; Barn Stormer Is Second.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 22.—Eddie Smith, Washington jockey, gave a heady saddle exhibition here this afternoon to win the Rappahannock Purse, the day's feature race, with Titian Kiddie, a game daughter of Light Brigade. Smith was riding for the public, too, for he was aboard a $5.20 favorite, and he brought her home a length in front of the highly touted Barnstormer. Another half length away came Gay Bride, to be third in the field of seven.

Thanks to Smith's fine piloting, Titian Kiddie was able to equal the track record of 0:49 3-5 for the 4½-furlong course set last Saturday by Energetic Lady.

Away on top, Titian Kiddie was soon joined by Barnstormer, but Smith was not tricked into using up the speed of his filly. When Jockey J. Feltner hustled Barnstormer to the front, a less-experienced rider might have put the pressure on to keep up. However, Smith just eased Titian Kiddie along. Entering the stretch, Smith asked his mount for speed and plied the whip to lend emphasis to the signal.

Ideal racing weather prevailed here in the mountains. The big boys of the Blue Ridge range were standing out in bold relief behind the back stretch and a cooling breeze fanned the 4,000 Monday customers.

The daily double came down toward earth with a pay-off of $71.60 being in order on the combination of Larry M and Bromide.

Three races were named for Washington golf professionals. The second event, the Wiffy Cox, proved a romp for Bromide, this gelding was the first of Eddie Smith's two winners. The third race, named in honor of Al Treder, of Manor brought a victory to Larry M while Energetic Lady won the George Diffenbaugh sponsored by the Indian Spring pro.

Nick Altrock Ties Frank Ward for Rock Creek Medal With 73

Six Over Par In 18-Hole Rounds

By Dave Herman.

Nick Altrock, comedian-coach of the Washington baseball club, and Frank Ward, a comparatively unknown municipal golfer, shot 73s, each, yesterday to tie for the medal in the qualifying round of the Rock Creek open golf championship.

Altrock and Ward, six over par for the 18-hole route, showed the way to a field of more than 75 golfers, three-fourths of whom are taking advantage of the three-day tournament to tune up for the forthcoming National Public Links qualifying trials and District championship.

Deadlocked at 75 were Herman Allen, hailed as the "best of the Muny putters;" Andy Oliveri, District junior and East Potomac spring champion; Barney Welsh Harold Bowers and Harry (Stymie) Yates.

decision to Washington's Young Van.

The winner weighed 179¾; Weimer, 182.

Joe David, a likely looking prospect from New Jersey when he entered the ring, didn't look so likely after Pete Galiano, of Baltimore, finished giving him a nice going over. Slowly but surely Pete worked on the lanky lightweight and finally climaxed his efforts by putting the chill on David with a left hook to the heart after two minutes and 36 seconds of the fourth round. The bout was scheduled to go six rounds.

Jackie Carter, an importation from Lancaster, made an auspicious debut by pounding his way to a split six-round decision over Joe Temes, the little Greek bulldog, in a fast and furious preliminary.

Washington Wins Collegiate Regatta

a perfect evening for the magnificent fleet from the Pacific Northwest was Washington's fourth in the blue-ribbon since the war, but the first for the huskies since 1926. Just ten years ago they triumphed over the Navy in a memorable race, in which they were stroked home by big Al Ulbrickson, now the head coach of the huskies.

Without manifesting a trace of emotion, Ulbrickson, from a coach's launch, saw his pupils sweep the river, paid them a few quietly spoken words of praise, conceded to back-slapping friends that it was a "pretty good day" and then took an evening train for New York to fill a radio appointment.

Wrestling's Quarrelsome Quartette

Dusek Quartet After Fourth Sweep

One for all and all for one, the roisterous Duseks, will be seeking to make four grand slams in five barnstorming performances when they appear enmasse at Griffith Stadium next Thursday night.

The four Musketeers of Matdom—brothers Rudy, Ernie, Emil and Joe—swept the slate clean in Camden, Philadelphia and Albany, but were all defeated in Toronto.

To achieve their ambition of making it four out of five, however, the daring duseks must subdue most formidable, imposing, impressive and even pretty good opposition.

Rudy, the ringleader of the group, the Peck's Bad Boy of the aggregation, has been cast with Joe Cox in a finish match. Ernie has been cast with George Koverly in a finish match which should finish the more excitable customers.

Emil will be pitted against roly-poly Gus Sonnenberg and Joe will snicker and snarl at Hank Barber in 30-minute numbers which should leave even the most phlegmatic of the fans as limp and weak as a fight writer's alibis for picking Louis to beat Schmeling.

March Meets Ritzenberg For Title

When the two wiry, hard-stroking athletes take the court at 3 p. m., it will mark the resumption of a rivalry which extends back to the inter-high tennis series when Allie was swatting for Central High and Harry was playing for Tech. March is especially intent on avenging a 9—7, 6—4, defeat handed him recently in the Georgetown University interscholastic championships.

Dollar-Pound Pact Seen With Franc Off Gold

London Reports Are That Dollar May Be Pegged at $5 to the Pound.

By the Associated Press.

London.—The possibility of cooperation between the United States and Great Britain in the event of devaluation of the French franc, is actively discussed in financial circles.

Rumors have been current in the money market that an agreement has already been reached but this is denied in official quarters. At the same time market men are strongly of opinion such co-operation would not be withheld if events make it necessary.

Should currency restrictions be imposed by France, which would in effect put France off gold, market opinion inclines to the belief that the slender link between the franc and the dollar would be severed, and it is this possibility which would necessitate combined action with regard to the dollar and pound sterling.

Official quarters are silent on anything connected with exchange equalization fund operations except the usual formula that it is used to 'smooth out fluctuations.' Unofficial quarters put out many suggestions however, the latest being that the dollar may be "pegged" around $5 to the pound at least for a time. This would admittedly be a 'tryout until some definite action could be taken towards international exchange stabilization.

Cotton Mill Activity Continues to Gain

New York, June 21.—The marked improvement in the cotton manufacturing industry of this country, which began about four weeks ago, was continued and extended during the past week, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service. Mill sales of both unfinished and finished goods continued to run above current production, further reducing unsold stocks of goods at mills and adding to unfilled orders.

"Orders placed with mills called for deliveries running into the last quarter of the year in many cases," says the Exchange Service. "Prices of goods rose more than the sharply advancing prices for the raw material. Forwardings of cotton to domestic mills have totaled 583,000 bales in the last four weeks, compared with 283,000 in the same weeks last year."

Steel Mill Operations Rise to 70.2 Per Cent

New York, June 22 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced .2 of a point to 70.2 per cent of capacity compared with 70.0 last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. This week's estimated rate compares with 67.9 per cent a month ago and 37.7 per cent for the like period last year.

It is the highest level reported since the week of April 27, which at 71.2 per cent represented the best rate since 1930.

Stocks Advance; Traders See Higher Dividends in New Tax Measure.

New York, June 22.—Stocks advanced further in a turnover of almost a million shares, but bullish enthusiasm was well restrained. Bonds were steady and quiet. Grains hardened. September wheat closed half a cent higher at 95¾ cents a bushel. Foreign exchanges continued under the spell of the good promises made by the French government for the support of francs.

Assembling of the cheering section in front of the Philadelphia grand stand probably had no effect on the markets. Prices edged forward during the Republican convention, and began this week with a tendency to continue. If indifference was shown to the coming Presidential campaign, at least much satisfaction was felt over the adjournment of a high spending, tax lifting Congress.

Passage of a new tax bill for some time has been regarded as inevitable and in its final form the measure avoids some of the worst proposals, but retains enough to give it a bad odor. The regular rate on corporation income is held at 15 per cent, the same as last year for consolidated returns, but the penalty tax on undistributed earnings run as high as 27 per cent.

New Taxes.

That is agreed by all hands as a bad principle and one which is bound to make it more difficult for small business to get along, to raise credit difficulties, to increase bankruptcies in times of stress, but perhaps to accelerate booms and increase dividends. Naturally the stock market trader is most interested in immediate effects, hoping to escape the penalty at the end of the spree and caring little for the economic welfare of the country, whatever may be his own views on what is good or bad as economic principle, his business is to anticipate price movements.

Wall street anaylsts were busy with lists of stocks that would be affected by the new tax measures, and interest was taken in those which, to avoid the penalty tax, might be expected to increase their dividends. That was especially true of those corporations well heeled with cash and which could afford, for a year or two at least, to pay out more cash to stockholders. Such a situation appealed to many traders, especially because the new law does not lift personal rates, beyond placing dividend receipts in ordinary tax brackets. Moreover, it was supposed that companies with preferred dividend arrears would be likely to liquidate in cash as early as possible.

Higher Dividends.

The appeal of higher dividends to the trader was enforced by the supposition that penalty taxes would strengthen the position of well established companies, and therefore bring in a greater amount of investment. Executives of many large corporations frankly have stated that they favored the new tax system, because, as at first drawn, it relieved them of the ordinary taxes, and in its final form the bill at least does not increase ordinary income taxes.

With higher dividends in sight, if earned, the market looked more closely into the possibility of earnings. Some cheer was found in this week's estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute for the steel industry. The operating rate will rise to 70.2 per cent, from 70 per cent of capacity last week. At the same time information from Detroit appealed to the speculative imagination on the motor industry, the favorite of the bonus spenders.

Chrysler Spurts.

Stock prices were good from the start. Without much change in the pace throughout the trading, the best quotations were reached in midafternoon. Motor shares were the favorites, led by Chrysler, which rose 3 points. General Motors was active and higher. Those stocks, with steel, made up about 10 per cent of the total trading. Hudson was the best in the low-priced motor group.

Railroad shares moved up from a fraction to 2 points. Central played in front. Other popular issues were Santa Fe, Nickel Plate and Delaware & Hudson. Prices were uniformly higher in the rubbers, accessories, equipments, foods, oils, metals, tobaccos and merchants. Mail orders improved and farm implements advanced. Case rose rapidly at times.

Public utilities came forward late in the day. Their gains were moderate. Standard Gas issues came along rapidly. In the general list gains of 1 to 3 points were made by Can, Sugar, Corn Products, Douglas, Eastman, Loews, Westinghouse and Manville.

Excess Reserves.

The proposals of S. Sloan Colt, president of the Bankers Trust Co. and retiring president of the New York State Bankers Association that excess reserves be reduced by withdrawal of $2,000,000,000 gold from the Federal Reserve banks and placing it in a stabilization fund interested a section of the financial community, partly because of the novelty of the method proposed, but largely because of the stand on excess reserves. Bankers who have plugged for a reduction in the excess reserves have by no means been few or unimportant, but at the same time others have urged that the matter was of relative unimportance at this time.

Gold Standard.

Admittedly the danger of inflation is greater from the unbalanced Federal budget and that no particular inflation is now going on. Perhaps those who would cut reserves feel that a small beginning is better than none and that anyhow the reserve problem is one that can be solved independently of political maneuvers. Excess reserves have been built up mainly from gold imports, which the banks can't stop, and no harm would come from taking offsetting measures, if the proper ones were used. Mr. Colt also advocated the return to a modified gold standard and international stabilization of currencies, which may be read as reflecting the opinions of leading directors of his bank.

Expense.

The new Federal Reserve Board has caught the spirit of the times and also believes in spending its way to prosperity. Its monthly bulletin now appears on a far more expensive grade of paper than that which satisfied the old regime.

Bankers Cover Broader Field, Fleming Says

New Brunswick, N. J., June 22.—Expressing confidence in the future of American banking, Robert V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association and president of the Riggs National Bank in Washington, told 400 bank officials here this evening at the Graduate School of Banking that "my faith is based, in a large measure, on the prevailing spirit I have found among the bankers of the country."

This evening's session marked the opening of the second term of the school which is conducted under the joint auspices of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University and held on the Rutgers campus.

Greetings of welcome were extended to the bankers by Robert C. Clothier, president of Rutgers University; Lewis E. Pierson, chairman of the board of the Irving Trust Co., New York, who is chairman of the board of regents of the banking school, and Dr. Harold Stonier, director of the school. Following the opening exercises, W. M. Kiplinger, Washington business writer, talked informally to the seminar session on "What's Ahead in Washington?"

Making Banking Clear.

In his opening address, Mr. Fleming said:

"We can put banking on a plane as high as any other profession if the American Bankers Association and State banking associations can make banking clear and understandable to the people, take a fair and temperate attitude and be constructive in approaching economic and legislative problems.

"Present day banking requires a far greater knowledge of banking and a more thorough understanding of the laws and regulations governing the conduct of the business than was ever required of our predecessors. Furthermore, it is not enough that we have a knowledge of the subject and an understanding of the rules governing its conduct—we must also be conversant with worldwide economic conditions.

School a New Factor.

"Therefore the Graduate School of Banking is bound to become a factor of increasing importance in the development of that caliber of future banking leadership which will insure the soundest and most adequate banking system geared to render the highest type of service to the people of this country.

"The period of transition through which we have just passed has brought vividly to our minds the fact that all banks now have national problems to consider, whereas but a few years ago many thousands of State banks were concerned only with State law and supervision. With the F. D. I. C. in operation, a program of national examination has become a reality. Both State and national banks, as well as the Government itself, are now concerned with the solvency of all institutions as a matter of national welfare.

"In addition to the F. D. I. C., as an examining, supervising, and insuring institution, we have several other Federal agencies, some of which supplement chartered banking while others afford business competition directly and indirectly for chartered banks. All this means that it is more necessary than ever that we, as bank officers, understand this problem and have an appreciation of what we must do in order that sound banking practices may prevail. It will be necessary for us to give more attention to the affairs of the Federal Government than ever before."

Acacia Occupies New $1,000,000 Home

The new home office building of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., on Louisiana avenue facing the Capitol, and costing nearly $1,000,000, was occupied yesterday. The building is so constructed that additional units can be built at any time as business expands. President Montgomery said that the formal opening for public inspection will take place June 30 in conjunction with a convention of field representatives.

Farm Equipment Sales 30% Over Last Year

New York, June 22.—Sales of farm equipment in 1936 should exceed $425,000,000, a gain of over $100,000,000, or more than 30 per cent over 1935, according to a special report issued today by the Brookmire Economic Service. According to the report a large gain in farm equipment sales does not necessarily require a gain in farm income, although the outlook for farm income indicates that larger incomes may be expected.

The analysis points out that, despite a fairly rapid increase in the use of tractors on farms, there is a conservatively - estimated potential market which is so large that it could keep the industry busy for the next nine years at the 1935 rate of output and it would thus seem probable that manufacturers of farm implements should earn substantially larger profits in 1936 over 1935.

Foreign Capital Rose 1.3 Billion Here Last Year

Basis of Heavy Gold Flow and Large Volume of Excess Reserves.

New York, June 22.—It is significant, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, that the amount of foreign capital in the United States increased by $1,365,000,000 in 1935. Foreign long-term investments increased by $765,000,000, while there was an inflow of foreign short-term funds to the extent of about $600,000,000. This movement of foreign capital to the United States, together with some repatriation of American short-term funds from abroad, was chiefly responsible for gold imports in 1935 in the net amount of $1,739,000,000.

Obviously, if the drain of gold to this country continues for long at the same rate as last year and the year before, the monetary gold stocks of the rest of the world would become so depleted as to be inadequate as a basis for currency and credit. Already many countries have divorced their currency systems from gold and, with the bulk of the gold supply concentrated in the United States, the readoption of the gold standard in anything like the same form as in the past will be very difficult if it is possible at all.

Potential Inflation.

These large gold imports, moreover, have had an unhealthy influence on the financial situation in the United States. Chiefly because of the huge inflow of the yellow metal, the reserve balances of the member banks at the end of 1935 were approximately $3,000,000,000 in excess of requirements. Since, for the country as a whole, about $10 of bank credit can be based on $1 of excess reserves the existing excess reserves constitute a basis for some $30,000,000,000 of potential new bank credit. Credit expansion of even a fraction of this amount would create an inflationary boom with ultimate disastrous consequences for the entire country.

Of course, the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system now has greatly increased powers of credit control and, under the banking act of 1935, may raise member bank reserve requirements by as much as 100 per cent, which would practically offset the effect on excess reserve balances of the gold imports of the last two years.

Another consideration is that the movement of foreign capital of the United States in 1935 undoubtedly had an appreciable effect on the American security markets. Although it is impossible to ascertain quantitatively the influence of foreign buying on security prices in this country, there is not much question that the demand for American securities from abroad was an important factor in the upward movement of security prices during 1935.

Retail Advertising 8.3% Above Year Ago

Chicago, June 22 (AP).—Advertising Age said today the increase in retail newspaper advertising, which was 8.3 per cent for the week ended June 13 over the corresponding week last year, "accurately reflects a betterment in retail activity during 1936."

Lineage in the 66 reporting newspapers was 1,370,292 lines better during the week of June 13, totaling 17,957,275 lines. For the year to date, the total was 15,143,984 lines ahead of last year, an increase of 3.8 per cent.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 22.—Prices were generally strong in today's stock market, although business was on a moderate scale. International Nickel, Woolworth, Imperial Silk and Anglo-American shares were in demand, and Canadian Atlantic issues, the mining group and oils firm.

Paris.—French rentes and industrial shares closed firm and were in fair demand. Domestic issues were higher on the optimistic interpretation of the government's financial program. Government bonds were well supported.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed more than a penny lower on reports of showers in the American and Canadian belts. A weakened technical position and improved European crop reports were also factors in the market. Cotton closed quiet and steady, unchanged, trade buying being supplied by profit taking and hedging.

On The Air Today

Comes forward now Richard Himber to dwell at some length on the subject of the elusive "swing" type of music. In fact Maestro Himber takes all the vagueness and elusiveness out of "swing."

Himber says:

"Recently a group of us at NBC were discussing what most musical people discuss when they get together these days—'swing' music. Practically every paper has at some time or another in the past few months, devoted space to 'swing' and invariably the articles begin with the statement 'swing' can not be defined.

"This is a fallacy. Or at least, such was the consensus of the group. 'Swing can be defined, and more than that, it can be analyzed. In order to do so, however, a few words of preface are necessary.

"There are two types of good musicians. Those doing radio programs, and those who do not. Generally speaking, the first set are skilled 'readers,' well versed in harmony and musical background and as familiar with intricacies of their instruments as an artisan with his tools. Radio needs men such as they, because broadcasting calls for precision, for perfect intonation 'as written' so that each instrument will be in color harmony with the next.

"The second group, while equally proficient in technique, are what we call 'imaginative' performers. They like to have a set of notes in front of them, but they like to use this set of notes as a pattern around which they can weave a design of their own manufacture and conception.

"That is 'swing.' Using your own imagination and expressing the results of that imagination in your music. If you have the true feeling of a 'swing' man, you're good. If you know what you'd like to have come out of that instrument of yours, but can't produce it unless the notes are there for you to read, you're not. It's as simple as that, really.

"You can't learn to 'swing.' Ask any legitimate piano, violin or clarinet instructor—how he has been bothered for ten years ago up to the moment by students who want to learn how to play 'hot.' He'll tell you, as he told them, that he couldn't teach anyone to 'feel' rhythm. One either does, or he doesn't. The 'hot' music of yesteryear is the 'swing' rhythm of today.

And that is why, says the director of the champions, in case you don't play yourself, that you either like "swing," or you do not. If you can understand what the instrumentalist is trying to convey, you're a tacit swingster yourself. If you can't, Himber says, don't feel a bit badly about it.

There's a hundred million others just like you!

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

The division of animal genetics in the Department of Agriculture has a new chief who says he is interested "in any experiment that means better wool on sheep, better meat from cattle or anything that will improve the breed of animals."

He is Dr. W. V. Lambert who came to Washington from the University of Iowa at Ames, Iowa, where he was assistant professor of genetics and in charge of the animal genetics investigations at the college experimental station.

Now he has charge of numerous such stations all over the country which are directed from the central offices in Washington. Among those closest at hand, and one with which he is most familiar in his new surroundings, is the department's work at Beltsville.

His Position Unique.

His position is unique in that he works with all other divisions and is called in as consulting expert by those dealing with specific animals.

"I simply give ideas and direction to the people working in the sheep office, for instance, or the beef breeding office and am primarily interested in anything that means improved breeding and better economics among animals."

Dr. Lambert took his undergraduate work in scientific lines at the University of Nebraska and subsequent degrees at the Universities of Kansas and California.

Phillips A. Hayward, chief of the Forest Products Division in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, celebrated his first birthday in his job the other day. He marked it by issuing a statement of appreciation for the co-operation he has received from his staff. Before taking over the head of the division, he served ten years in other branches of the Department of Commerce.

200,000 New U. S. Jobs.

The Civil Service Reform League, with headquarters in New York, released its annual statement yesterday which caused no little attention in the Government offices all over the city.

Approximately 200,000 Government jobs have come into being since the New Deal began, the report states, and 95 per cent of them have been excepted from civil service. Jobs free from civil service leaped to a high-water mark of 154,800, while there are thousands more under the WPA with Federal positions under the service decreased by 852.

By last April, the league report says, there were 36 independent agencies of which 25, with 111,000 workers, were outside the merit system's rules and the remaining 11 offered numerous loopholes from civil service restriction by giving latitude in the hiring of attorneys, engineers and experts.

And this condition, the report pointed out, exists in the face of agitation for the Civil Service code unprecedented since the time of the passage of the law. Groups throughout the country have asked for Civil Service in all branches of the Government.

Congress Spurns "Mandate."

"Congress has utterly failed to recognize this demonstration as a mandate from the public. No constructive personnel legislation that has been before it has received more than cursory attention."

A statement from Secretary of Commerce Roper of last January was quoted in which he declared, "we must approach the compelling question of efficiency in public service from a much broader viewpoint than that of the Civil Service system alone. When people of the Nation vote their approval of the policies of one or the other of the parties they are, in effect, stating that these policies shall be carried out and put into action by men who are in harmony with them. Any other interpretation of this question would be an utter refutation of the mandate of the people."

This statement, the Reform League said, is nothing more than a return to theory of sweeping the "ins" out with the change of Administrations.

The fact that the new jobs had to be done in a hurry and allowed no time for other procedure has been given as the reason for the hiring of non-Civil Service people. But the report emphatically states that during the last four years the registers of the Civil Service Commission have been filled with eligibles who have not been given jobs.

N. F. F. E. Seeks Clubhouse

The 12 local unions of the National Federation of Federal Employes, or nearly 18,000 Government workers in the city, want their own clubhouse for meetngs and social activities. Just how they are to finance such an undertaking, which has been one of those things they have dreamed about for some years, they themselves do not know. But the plan has reached the stage where delegates from the unions unanimously voted the other night that it was a good idea and that the time had come to start doing something definite about it.

Joseph Stansfield of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the new president of the District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes appointed a committee of three to investigate the possibilities of leasing a suitable building, of buying a place which would be equipped for their needs, or of building.

The committee members are W. E. Hoffheins, War; Frank Lombard, Agriculture, and Roberta Lindsay, Treasury.

The clubhouse idea may start in a small way, but the ultimate aim is to provide not only auditoriums and recreational rooms, but living quarters as well. A number of the union members do not belong to departmental social and recreational clubs and Stansfield declared such a clubhouse would give them opportunities along this line.

The Postal Bulletin, publication of the Postoffice Department that goes to postmasters throughout the country, will carry a word of thanks to every employe of the vast national system for his help in getting out the bonus certificates so speedily.

Foot Specialist Saves His 'Dogs' (And 13 Lives)

Chiropodist Keeps Shoes On, Swims, Runs for Aid for Sinking Yacht.

A "foot conscious" chiropodist, who on Sunday night swam 100 yards in 10 feet of water with his shoes on, was credited yesterday with saving the lives of 13 passengers aboard a sinking yacht in the Potomac River, off the Army War College.

And in addition to his shoes, the one-man rescue party, Dr. Oswald E. Roggenkamp, was fully clothed. He swam from midstream to Bolling Field when the 50-foot cabin cruiser struck a piling and started to ship water. Then he ran nearly a mile to summon aid.

But yesterday, Dr. Roggenkamp was more interested in his feet than plaudits of his yachting party. He was glad to be a hero, but he was just as glad he hadn't hurt his feet.

"Being a foot specialist," he explained, "I am naturally 'foot conscious.' I knew I would have a long way to run when I reached shore and I didn't want to injure my feet. I refused to take off my shoes before I dived into the river—and now I'm glad I did."

The party of young men and women were on a pleasure cruise down the river when the accident occurred. After his long swim, Dr. Roggenkamp notified Harbor Police of his companions' plight.

Charles H. Munday, 56, 301 Greenwood avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was acting as pilot. The yacht, Casino, is owned by Charles Slade, 307 Greenwood avenue, who was repairing a stern light when the piling was struck.

When the craft started shipping water, Slade became alarmed and asked Dr. Roggenkamp to go for aid. Women members of the party became hysterical when cries for help were not answered by passing boats. After several anxious hours, the passengers were rescued by Harbor Police.

Others aboard were Mrs. Munday, Ruth Shiffer, 626 Carroll avenue; Clarice Baum, 200 Flower avenue; Lavern Sandridge, 104 Flower avenue; Russell and Nevins Harlan, 25 Westmoreland avenue; Charles McClure, 252 Park avenue; Ruth Pettibone, 301 Greenwood avenue; Leila Westberg, 415 Greenwood avenue, and J. Paul Stauffer, 5 Columbia avenue, all Takoma Park, and Henrietta Townsend, 1801 I street northwest.

Unions to Send New Organizers Into Alabama

Warning to 'Get Out of Town' Is Charged in Gadsden Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

Gadsden, Ala., June 22.—Union labor leaders said today they were sending additional men to this rubber, steel and textile manufacturing center in answer to an order they charged was given a United Rubber workers organizer, "to get out of town."

Chief of Police S. L. O'Bannon said he had heard nothing of the threat.

Informed of a statement by B. J. Widick, of Akron, Ohio, that the "get out" order was issued by "flying squadmen," A. C. Michaels, general superintendent of the local Goodyear, Tire and Rubbert plant, said "we know nothing about any flying squadmen."

Widick said he was authorized to speak for the union.

Beating Charged.

The incident followed upon Saturday's labor organization rally here, called after S. H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers president, reported in Akron he was beaten after an organization meeting with rubber workers here.

Chairmen of committees claiming to represent 7,000 workers in the local plants earlier had asserted a determination to resist "any interference by outsiders or other persons" in the relations between employers and employes.

Cites Threats.

George B. Roberts, identifying himself as a representative of the American Federation of Labor, sent here by Federation President William Green, said Organizer J. E. Foreman was called out of bed at his hotel last night. In the lobby, he was invited outside by three men. When he refused, Roberts said, the men told him to leave town before morning. Foreman still was in Gadsden today.

Roberts said "nine or ten" organizers now are at work in Gadsden. The United Rubber Workers announced in Akron several days ago a $100,000 fund had been provided for organization work, with headquarters here.

Saturday's labor rally was described by Roberts as "a complete success." He said it "should prove to the citizens of Gadsden that there was no thought or intention on the part of organized labor to cause any disorder in their city."

Sims Out of Danger.

Boston, June 22 (AP).—Dr. Harvard A. Crabtree, who operated last week on Admiral William S. Sims, 77, retired, commander of United States naval forces in European waters during the World War, reported today the admiral was "definitely out of danger." Admiral Sims has been at the Deaconess Hospital since June 15 and is expected to remain another two weeks.

Two Jobless Men Beaten to Death

St. Louis, June 22 (AP).—Two unemployed men, who witnessed a $400 bonus bond robbery of a former soldier, were found beaten to death today in their squalid living quarters in an abandoned riverfront building.

Two detectives, making their daily search of the building, in which transients frequently stop for the night, found William Maddigan, 48 years old, dead on his cot in a first-floor room. His head, pillowed on a sack of rags, had been crushed.

In a second-floor room, on a pile or rags used as a pallet, the officers found William Hoelscher, 60. He was unconscious and died an hour later at the city hospital without being able to make a statement.

Maddigan and Hoelscher had witnessed the robbery Saturday of Roy Harder, 49 years old, an unemployed cooked. Three men, arrested by police and identified by the witnesses, had been held in jail since Saturday.

Nebraska, and Max Steuer, New York lawyer.

The Vice President did not speak at the exercises, at which 100 degrees were conferred, but took part earlier in an inspection of the A. Harry Moore School for Crippled Children. He presented medals to three honor students.
